A GRACE THAT HEALS

This week, I would like to share a story that I have recently read that impacted me greatly. I shared with the congregation at Riverside the other week, but it is a good enough story that I think everyone should hear it.

In the aftermath of apartheid's collapse in South Africa in 1994, the new government under Nelson Mandela established a Truth and Reconciliation Commission whose task it was to investigate specific acts of brutality committed in the name of apartheid and to seek some measure of resolution that would enable the country to move forward.

At one meeting early in their work, the commission gathered to reach a verdict on a particularly painful case involving an elderly South African woman. At the hearing, a group of white police officers, led by a Mr. Van de Broek, admitted their personal responsibility in the death of her 18-year-old son. They acknowledged shooting the young man at point-blank range, setting his body on fire, and then partying around the fire until the body had been reduced to little more than ashes. Eight years later, van de Broek and his fellow officers had again intersected with the woman's life, this time to take her husband into captivity. And then, some time later, van de Broek had come knocking at her door once more. Rousing her from bed in the dead of night, he brought the woman to an isolated setting by a river where her husband lay tied to a pile of wood. As she watched, he and the officers doused the man with gasoline and then ignited a fire. The last words her husband spoke to her, in the midst of the blazing pyre, were "Forgive them." Now at long last the time had come for justice to be served. Those involved had confessed their guilt, and the Commission turned to the woman for a final statement regarding her desire for an appropriate punishment. "I want three things," the woman said calmly. "I want Mr. van de Broek to take me to the place where they burned my husband's body. I would like to gather up the dust and give him a decent burial."

'Second, Mr. van de Broek took all my family away from me and I still have a lot of love to give. Twice a month, I would like for him to come to the ghetto and spend a day with me so I can be a mother to him."

'Third, I would like Mr. van de Broek to know that he is forgiven by God, and that I forgive him, too. And, I would like someone to come and lead me by the hand to where Mr. van de Broek is so that I can embrace him and he can know my forgiveness

As the elderly woman made her way across the silent courtroom, van de Broek reportedly fainted, overcome by emotion. And then the silence was broken when someone began singing "Amazing Grace." Others soon picked up the words of the familiar hymn, so that finally the entire audience in the courtroom was joined in song. From John Roth's Choosing Against War: A Christian View, 62-63. He claims to have "drawn extensively from the account of the story by Stanley Green, "When Reconciled, We are Free," Mennonite Weekly Review, Sept. 7, 2000, 4. You can read more of

STAY IN THE ROUGH WA-

Winning the Battle for a Generation Column by: Rick Jones, Defiance Area

Sometimes the peaceful areas that surround areas of turbulence or danger are not what they seem. For example, Palmer Chinchen, True Religion (David C. Cook, 2010), pp. 55-57:

My brothers and I had traveled to the western edge of Zimbabwe to raft the Zambezi River. We boarded our raft at the base of the Victoria Falls. Massive amounts of water spilled over the top of the giant falls and dropped almost a thousand feet; the roar was deafening. The falls are the largest in the world, more than a mile wide and three hundred feet high. Mist from the spray that fills the air like fog can be seen for fifty miles; the locals call it "Smoke That Thunders." The water from the falls rushes down the gorge in torrents, creating the world's largest rapids. In the United States, the highest-class rapid you are allowed to raft is a Class 5. The Zambezi's whitewater rapids can top 7 and 8... As I sat on the edge of the eight-person raft, all suited up in a tight, overstuffed jacket and a thick crash helmet, I felt like an overcautious tourist about to mount an overpowered moped in Honolulu or rent roller-blades on Huntington Beach. The Zambezi can't be that dangerous, can it? But then our guide [said],

"When the raft flips..." There was no "If the raft flips" or "On the off chance we get flipped." But "When the raft flips." He went on, "...stay in the rough water. You will be tempted to swim toward the stagnate water at the edge of the banks. Don't do it. Because it is in the stagnate water that the crocs wait for you. They are large and hungry. Even when the raft flips, stay in the rough Stagnancy will kill your spirit. The church of tomorrow must resist stagnancy. God needs us out there in the rough waters, pouring our lives into people... Live in the whitewater. Live where it's just a little bit uncertain and unsafe.

Regarding facing testing and trials the scriptures remind us that they are screened, permitted to come into our lives for a Divine purpose, so, hang in there, don't give up, don't let discouragement reign... James 1:2-3 (NIV) "2Consider it pure joy, my brothers, whenever you face trials of many kinds, 3because you know that the testing of your faith develops perseverance.

Huron Indians - Part 6: The Medicine Man

For several years I have had an Indian medicine man's bag made from a real turtle shell.

I also have one made from a skunk skin with a shoulder strap. They are "Shaman's' bags in which they kept their herbs and charms and drugs for ritual.

The Jesuits, thought that the Huron Indians had little knowledge of medicinal plants which was limited to some powdered roots like wild sarsaparilla. This was used to cure ulcers and other sores. A root like a small carrot or peeled chestnut or Indian turnip was used to purge the phlegm and moisture in the heads of some people or to clear the complexion. It sometimes burned, so was first burned into ashes. The Indians also used emetics and hot rooms (tents) to sweat out the "bad" things out of your body. A lot of what the Indians

Purging was another Indian remedy, especially for overweight people. Some-times the Indian doctor would spit in the patient's mouth or into the broth given to the patient to bring up the "bad medicine". Bloodletting was sometimes used in certain tribes for certain illnesses. "Snake Oil" rubs were popular for many things (I'm not sure where they got the oil from.).

Dreams were highly regarded when a person was ill. The medicine man would try to note what the dreams meant and to what regard they meant to the illness. He would try to see if it made the soul of the person angry and if it did, he would try to appease it with a feast or otherwise. Some dreams foretold wars, misfortune, friendship or death of the person having the dream of a family member.

The Medicine man supposedly had the power to penetrate the into the depths of the soul and see the desires that the sick person had dreamed about and had forgotten.

Sometimes they would look into a basin of water to try to see an image or down into a pit of water to see souls of the dead. Some stared into the burning fires to try to find clues of what was the matter while they were shaking a rattle of bones and dancing.

Some Medicine men were good and some were not. Some could predict the weather, wars, epidemics, births, deaths, feasts, coming of strangers in the land, etc. When they did not predict things, then the tribes were caught in a bind. These Medicine men were considered NOT good Medicine men. Some "Medicine men" could turn a rod into a serpent or come back to life af-

IT WILL BE DIFFER-ENT FOR ME

By: Pastor Joel DeSelm, Woodburn Missionary Church

In A View From The Zoo, Gary Richmond, a former zoo keeper, tells about an experience a friend had with a raccoon. He explains that raccoons go through a glandular change at about 24 months. After that, they no longer are cute and cuddly but become vicious and mean. They often attack their owners.

A 30-pound raccoon can be equal to a 100-pound dog in a fight. Richmond felt compelled to warn his young friend, Julie, of the change coming to her pet raccoon.

She listened politely as he explained the coming danger. She responded by saying what people usually say: "It will be different for me... She smiled as she added, "Bandit wouldn't hurt me. He just wouldn't."

Three months later Julie underwent plastic surgery for facial lacerations sustained when Bandit attacked her for no apparent reason.

"It will be different for me..." That statement echoed through my soul as I read that story. Those six words seem to be the hallmark of people today. "It may happen to others, but I will be the exception."

Does any young person who begins drinking ever expect to be an alcoholic? Does any individual who begins experimenting with drugs ever expect to get hooked? Does any married person who becomes involved in an extra-marital affair ever look down the road to see the destruction he or she is bringing to other people involved?

"It will be different for me..." But it never is. The Bible says the wages of sin is death. When we violate a biblical command, death will occur. Death to our integrity. Death to our reputation. Death in our relationships. Death in our capacity to commune with God.

'It will be different for me..." Really? The scripture tells us in Galatians 6 that God is not mocked. As a man sows, so will he reap.

All of us at points in our —Gregg Gorman life think we can beat the system. We think that we can dabble in questionable areas or allow  $\hat{q}uestionable$ patterns to develop in our lives without fallout taking

"It will be different for me..." Uh huh. I wonder how many pet raccoons we enjoy in our own lives that seem so innocent and harmlesswith little thought given to their destructive powers and long term consequences?

And yet, how hard it is for us to really believe these "raccoons" will hurt us. We think we know best. We think we're in control. We think that we can handle it. But we're wrong.

May we take a lesson from the zookeeper and heed his advice. There's a young lady named Julie who is carrying the pain and scars who wished she had.

NAL CHAPTER 18: WEST OUT OF KEARNEY

By: Stan Jordan

Boy, winter is back. We have faced the west wind all day and it is cold. No rain or snow, but a cold wind. I put on my bib overalls and am also using my buffalo robe on my feet and legs. But we can't complain too much because this whole trip east out of Bridger and now back west out of Independence has been good. No blizzards of snow and no deluge of rain, but that sure was a raw-biting

I haven't written for a day or so. That day we met up with Limping Buffalo, we were in the area of where Elm Creek dumps into the North Platte River. I can still remember and yet am pretty proud of my part of the Pow Wow with White Elk. He was very serious and had a stern look on his face, but when he saw his new chopping hatchet a little grin came up on the corners of his mouth. I was watching him pretty close that day. As El Paso Sam said, "Always look them right in the eyes."

Well, the cold wind has let up a little. We just keep pushing west on the Oregon Trail. Right now we are passing a Pony Express Relay Station. We won't have any lunch today so we push on toward a little place called Lexington.

I am back again, I haven't written for a couple days because nothing has happened, we just keep going west by the bumpity-bump on the trial. We pass a place called Lakoda Junction. For some reason there is nothing there, not even a shade tree, and a place called Gothenburg. This was probably a German settlement. We bounce along and head for North Platte City. We want to be in and out of there by March 20th. We can do that because these folks are having a drought of no snow or rain. The rivers and creeks are no problem for us to cross. But like I said, these folks are needing rain.

We stayed at Willow Island, a stop over for the Wells

We are in North Platte now. We greased all the axles and places that needed it. We bought some ear corn for the animals. Actually we didn't need much, just rest for the animals and us.

About two or three days back, we heard this constant rumble, like thunder, but there wasn't a cloud in the sky, just a big cloud of dust off to the north. It was buffalo, zillions of them. They were thicker that heads of wheat in a wheat field. They were a couple of miles away, but what a sight and sound! I guess about all they are good for is food for the Indians. That is the Indians main staple.

Then at North Platte you see Canadian Geese. That is the North-South Fly Way for those birds. What a sight, what a mess. They are so thick that they blot out the sun. Most of them are moving on north. There are also some heads of ducks. The people of the city don't like the messy geese, but they were here first—probably forever!

We are out of North Platte on March 20, running northwest to Scott's Bluff, then a few miles into Wyoming Ter-

There is not much between here and there. Just more riding and bumps. But the days are a little longer now. It is not hot or dusty like last summer when we went through here. We generally eat a good breakfast and supper, and skip lunch. Well, we all loaded up on beef jerky and the like so we just keep driving and rest the horses once in a while. When we left North Platte, I got about 1/2 gallon of sausage gravy and biscuits and that made a few meals for us. Sometimes at the stage stops, we pick up some extra food. None of us fellows like to cook very well, so we pick up an easy meal whenever we can.

We rode about three or four days going west out of North Platte heading northwest towards Scott's Bluff, and we had stopped early for supper but mainly because we found a spot of good grass for the animals. We had the chores done and our supper over when Slim came and asked me to look at one of his mules. Now the mule wasn't down or anything like that, but he brayed a lot and stomped around and you know there was something wrong. I told Slim I didn't know much about mules, but I would sure look at him. We talked a bit and I made over the mule and he was uncomfortable. I thought about the animals and then remembered they ate of the new green grass instead of our regular food. I told Slim I think he ate too much grass and he is full of gas and is bloated up.

I don't have anything in my grip for a problem like that, but after a little thought of what Mom would have done for one of us kids I thought I had a plan.

I remembered when we left Fort Bridger last November, Jim Bridger asked me to bring him a sack of those pink peppermint candies that old folks use for an upset

So I went to my wagon and brought out the sack of peppermints. I told Slim to give the mule one for him to taste it and chew it up. Because if he eats the first one, he will be ready for the rest of them because they are sweet.

Well, he did eat the first one and then six more out of Slim's hand. We stood and talked a few minutes about the whole area not being worth much. Pretty soon the mule burped a number of times and then a lot of gas. The mule shook his head a little and stomped a time or two, as to say he was okay. You know, I believe that darn mule grinned at me.

That was a couple of days ago. I haven't written because it is just mile after mile of nothingness. I sing a little bit to pass the time and my team don't seem to mind it.

We have gone through Osh Gosh, not much there. Ĭ think it just dried up and people moved away. The next place beside the State and Pony Express stop will be Broadwater and then a straight run into Scott's Bluff. That is a busy place for wagoners. The Bluff is a huge stone monolith, a freak of nature like none of the other monoliths. They are hard to describe and harder to figure where they came from and when.

We will stop here and have the Smithy look at all the shoes on the animals. We will grease all the places and a good rest for us and the animals. I will see if any dealer has some hay or corn. We have plenty for now, but we will soon be in the Rockies and animal feed there is pretty scarce.

It is fourteen miles from Scott's Bluff to the Wyoming Territory and then 27 more miles to Fort Laramie and I'm sure anxious to get there. Oh, Boy! Only 41 miles to Ft.,

Next Week: Ft. Laramie See ya!

ANTWERP EMS PANCAKE AND SAUSAGE FUNDRAISER

The all-you-can-eat breakfast will be held at the Antwerp EMS station on the corner of Cleveland and Daggett Streets in Antwerp from 7:00 a.m. til 12:00 p.m. Examples of the extrication gear will be at the

see you there.

If you go north on SR 49, one and a half mile past the Maumee River bridge on the left hand side of the road is the home of Senator Foghorn, a 14-foot rooster. He is just like any other politician, he really isn't anything much, he just stands around and takes up a lot of space. He isn't a Rhode Island Red, he isn't a Leghorn and he isn't a Buff Orfington. He is the remnant of an old Ash tree that the Emerald Ash Dan Hahn, Ken and Jan's son took his chain saw and did away with the rest of the dead tree and then created Senator Foghorn.

Dan did a very good job of making this big tree stump look like a rooster and then did a fine job of painting him to look like one.

Dan is a multi-talented fellow. If you remember, Sue and I went out to Ken's barn where Dan welded together a nine foot steel moose. That moose today adorns a landscape and gardening business in Huntington, Indi-

Dan worked for years as a welder in the U.S. Army Tank Plant in Lima. Then he found work closer to home in the B.F. Goodrich Plant. He and his wife, Karen, and their two daughters live on Township Road 33, east off CR 230.

Sue and I stopped and talked to Ken and Jan, and took this picture of that noted Chicken Senator and you are welcome to stop also.

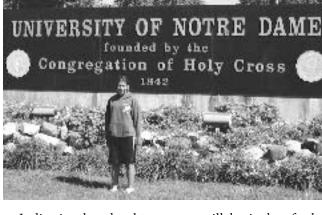

But now if you just drive by and look in, do it this way: come from the north on SR 49 and slow down right in front of their house and look into Ken's back yard. You can get a good look at the bird from there. But please watch the traffic. That is a very busy road.

Lydia, who is on the Cross Country Team under the direction of Coach Cord Ehrhart of Antwerp School, attended the University of Notre Dame Track & Field/ Cross Country Camp on July 9 – July 13.

According to Coach Ehrhart, Lydia is the first student from Antwerp to attend this camp. Lydia said there were approximately 60 students from all over the United States present.

The goal of the cross country camp was to expose the student to the education, physical training and most importantly, motivation that will jump start their season and help them to achieve their goals. The educational components included injury prevention, strength training, nutrition, crosstraining racing and training ideas. The physical training was designed to enhance the runner's endurance base as they continue their pre-season training.

Their schedule was from 7:00 a.m. until 8:00 p.m. Every day consisted of morning training sessions, lecture sessions, swimming activities, evening training sessions and then group ac-

Lydia has enjoyed her last two years of Cross Country at Antwerp School; however, will begin her freshman year at Mojave Prep School in North Las Vegas, Stan: Lydia's coach, Cord

Ehrhart, told me that she is a hard worker, tries for betterment each time and is a coach-able student. He knows she will do well at that school in Vegas. They have a good track & field program. At Notre Dame, Lydia met students from many other states: California, Hawaii, Colorado, Washington, Michigan, Indiana, etc. This is a College Prep

School that has a good long distance track team.

Lydia took a first place in long distance at the Oakwood meet last school year.

Lydia told me her new school will have some classes towards her main goal in life—which is to attend John Hopkins University in Baltimore or to become a medical doctor.

Lydia loves to swim and dive and might play a little soccer out there.

Well, Lydia, your leaving will sure leave a hole at the Dave and Joyce Carr home. I know your mother is going to school out their now, and she will be glad to see you and your brother, David.

Lydia, we here at the WBN are very proud of you as a straight 'A' student and we know you will do well at your new school.

Many garden plants and soybean fields, especially during extended dry periods, are susceptible to becoming a host to spider mites. Spider mites, a type of arachnid, are very small and almost impossible to see with the naked eye. Spider mites range in color from reds and browns to yellows depending on the species of the spider mite and the sea-

Spider mites, like many arachnids, make webbing. This is more noticeable when the spider mites are in a high population and can easily be confused with that of other arachnids. The webbing is formed to give the spider mite eggs protection.

The best way to confirm a spider mite infestation is to hold a sheet of white paper under a branch and then to tap the branch sharply. If present, they will fall off and be seen as tiny specks crawling over the paper. Crawling is the characteristic that most clearly distinguishes mites from the grit that can also be knocked off a plant.

Spider mites feed on the sap of plants. During their feeding process, injury is inflicted on the plant. This occurs when the spider mite uses its whip-like mouthparts to get the sap. The area of feeding on the plant is then bruised. The injury can be identifiable as small, discolored spots on the plants, giving the plant an overall speckled appearance. The leaves of the plant will continue to become discolored until they become noticeably dirty gray or bronze in color. The leaves may eventually fall off prematurely because of a spider mite infestation. If the infestation is not treated, the entire plant may die.

There are a few different approaches to getting rid of spider mites. The first is to add predatory mites that will feed on the spider mites as a natural way of controlling a spider mite infestation. For agricultural purposes this is not practical or economically feasible. If the infestation is not at an economical level, using natural enemies to control the infestation can be effective for home gardeners.

A second natural approach for spider mite control for homeowners is spraying the affected plants with water. Since rainy weather seems to knock off spider mites, using a forceful et of water from a hose can perform the same task. A regular syringing can keep spider mites under control on most ornamental plants in the landscape. This technique also helps conserve natural predators.

To eliminate moderate to heavy infestations of spider mites usually requires the use of specific pesticides known as miticides. Miticides are specifically developed for spider mite control. Effective homeowner options include horticultural oils, and insecticidal/miticidal soaps. Horticultural oils and soaps can be effective alternatives to conventional miticides but require thorough coverage so that all mite stages are contactbe necessary for satisfactory control because not all pesticides have an effect on the

GIVING OHIOANS A VOICE IN THEIR GOVERNMENT

Guest Column from State Representative Lynn Wachtmann

With Ohioans becoming more concerned about growing government power and rising tax rates, I think it is important for voters' voices to be heard. The democratic process is the hallmark of our great nation and strengthens the bond between citizens and their elected officials. Unfortunately, the House Democrats seem to have forgotten that they were sent to Columbus to serve the people of their districts-not to silence them entirely.

Recently, a vote was held in both the Ohio House and Senate that would have placed a referendum of the new national health care law on the November ballot. Senate Joint Resolution 1, which was companion legislation to House Joint Resolution 2, would have protected the freedom of Ohioans to choose their health care and health care coverage. Namely, the Health Care Freedom Act would have prevented the socialist disaster known as Obamacare from forcing any Ohioan to purchase health care coverage, while also preventing any Ohioan from facing penalties from Washington if they choose to opt out.

Every Republican in both chambers voted in favor of giving power to the voters, and it passed overwhelmingly in the Senate. In the House, only one Democrat vote was required to put the referendum on the ballot. But the Democrats stood in lock step, and that one vote was not cast. They instead acted as an impenetrable barrier between Ohioans and Washington.

I would like to reiterate that had the Health Care Freedom Act received bipartisan support in the House, it would have simply put the issue on the ballot, where its fate would have been left to the people. It would not have repealed it outright. It seems to me that if the House Democrats truly represented the interests of their districts, they would have welcomed the chance to ensure that the most important federal issue was left to the will of the voters. If they were confident that Obamacare is good for Ohio and is widely supported, they wouldn't have so feared the outcome of a November election. Their actions on this vote reveal much about whose interests they are really serving.

PAGE 7 - WEST BEND NEWS - AUGUST 10, 2011

Fortunately, Ohioans reclaimed their voices by collecting enough signatures to put the initiative on the November 2011 ballot. This was another great example of democracy in action, in which Ohioans have shown that they want to have a choice of whether or not to allow Washington into their homes and doctors' examination rooms in this way. Even more significantly, they have shown that despite the bureaucrats' best efforts to silence their voices, they refused to be discouraged or I have to ask why the same Democrats who attempted to silence Ohioans on the health care debate now are whistling a different tune on Senate Bill 5. They embrace and are fully supportive of allowing voters to decide the fate of this bill to place reasonable reforms on Ohio's collective bargaining laws, yet they must believe that anyone who opposes Obamacare simply does not warrant a vote.

It is important that people have mechanisms in place by which to hold their government accountable. It is just a shame that some politicians do not always feel the same way.

CITIZENS OF WOODBURN

I wish to address the concerns regarding the property restoration from the recent sewer project.

We are aware the planting of the grass did not grow due to the combination of hot weather and/or rain. This has been addressed and replanting will take place in the fall.

The installation of each lateral line connecting the home to the main sewer line was installed at NO COST to the homeowner. The City of Woodburn chose not to impose the approximate $3,000 - $4,000 fee for each lateral line to each household.

Keeping in mind the cost savings to you and taking pride in your property, when the replanting takes place in the fall; the City of Woodburn requests your cooperation in the watering and maintaining of your property. By working together, we continue to make Woodburn a great place to live.

Thank you for your patience and cooperation,

THE EVOLUTION OF THE HIGH SCHOOL MARCHING BAND

By: Charles A. Lutz

On any given Friday night and you attend the local high school football game, when halftime comes and your high school band takes to the field you ask the question, "What has happened to my high school marching band?" The marching band concept was originally started to enhance the military services in their presentations of ceremonies and parades. In many colleges there were ROTC programs and the college bands were utilized to perform this function. The college band primarily played in the stands at the football games to bolster the enthusiasm of the student body by playing the school songs and a variety of music to entertain the crowd. At the halftime they would leave the stands and take the field. Using the basic military style of marching by rank and file they were able to maneuver up and down the field. By breaking off into smaller marching units from the basic block they were able to form the school letters and play the fight song. From this beginning and utilizing the eight steps to five yards they were able to produce other formations; however, they were still tied to the basic military style

About this time the high school bands who were also relegated to the stands copied the colleges and moved to the field where they played "The Star Spangled Banner" and also formed the school letter using the basic military style

Now along comes the drum and bugle corps and completely changed the concept of the marching. They introduced the style of marching, heel and toe by marching from the waist down and keeping the upper body rigid and constantly facing the audience. This then allowed each musician to become a marching unit by himself and was able to move forward, backward left or right as the need arose. They then added on the sidelines the variety of instruments that were too bulky to carry on the field, such as the tympani, xylophone, marimba, chimes, gong, etc. By adding these instruments this increased the scope of music that could be used on the field. Now with the capability of the individual marching band member they could create a kaleidoscopic effect by using the eight step, 16 steps, 32 steps which gave us the image of floating and constant movement to create different designs on the field still constantly facing the audience. To enhance this program they added auxiliary units such as flag twirlers and rifle spinners which added to the general effect and audience appeal.

They further developed competitions and each other in categories such as, side line unit, drum line, flag twirlers, rifle spinners of marching and played the school songs. The high school bands began to add dance steps and utilizing the eight steps to five yards were able to now create, thematic shows but still used the military

THE PUNKY PRUNE

By: Rachel Steiner

Being a parent is one of the craziest things I've ever enlisted myself in. It is full of constant battles such as doing what you believe in (if you can even figure that out in the first place!?!) or giving in to the norms of society; both of which can lead to full-out mommy breakdowns on the kitchen floor. We all want what is best for our kids. We want them to be healthy, successful and educated. The scary part is that we are the role models they are most likely to follow. Those are some big shoes to fill!

We all know that obesity is on the rise and kids are unfortunately onboard that bandwagon. A recent study I wandered across focused on whether it was right, wrong, helpful or harmful to hide veggies in our kids' food in hopes of helping them to become healthier eaters. The study was conducted by Penn State University and their group of 3-5 year olds were fed meals with added pureed broccoli, cauliflower, zucchini, tomatoes and squash to their favorite foods. They say the kids ate the veggie-enhanced versions without making the "yucky face". In case you think children are just easily fooled, the researchers say they had similar results in feeding veggie-laced entrees to adults. The good news is that the kids ended up eating twice as many veggies a day and ate 11% less calories over the course of the day.

But my question is, is this really teaching kids to be healthier eaters? Well, it depends on your motives behind it. If you are doing it out of trickery, then no, it doesn't do much good and can even teach your kids to deceive, or lie. What if they don't notice the "enhanced" pasta sauce, you ask? They will eventually. You have to learn to like, or at least eat, some things that are good for you, a little bit ever day. If you go through life being tricked into not eating vegetables for what they are, you'll probably never order the carrots when you go out to dinner, favoring the French fries instead.

If however, you are open about adding some new veggies to sauces and meals, then that's awesome. We hardly ever eat anything without some weird veggie thrown in some how. And we do not do it with the intent to mask the veggie, but rather to enhance the flavor of the sauce or overall meal. We like the taste and we like the nutrition. And since our daughter is always helping in the kitchen, she knows what's going on and that we aren't trying to pull one over her.

Here are some of our ideas for bulking up your family meals at home with more

-Add mashed pumpkin or squash to your macaroni and cheese recipe. It's the same color and adds a great creaminess factor and fun

-Mix in mashed cauliflower with your mashed po-

Try adding in mashed avocado or potatoes to make a meal more creamy. This works great with pesto sauce, soups or casseroles. —Add any cooked and pureed veggie (such as broccoli, spinach, or carrots for sweetness!) to traditional tomato -Add pureed zucchini to pancakes, muffins, cakes and cookies. Pumpkin, carrots and squashes are also grand If you have any questions

4-H CAMP COUNSELORS TAKE WORKFORCE SKILLS TO THE NEXT LEVEL!

Paulding County is just one of the many counties in the state participating in the Camp Counselor Work-Based Learning Project. This program is designed to transition the skills that camp counselors are learning into skills they can use in preparation for the workforce. This year Paulding had 22 camp counselors who participated in this program during their 24 hours of required training. During each training session the counselors focused on a different topic. The topics included "Communication Skills," "Working Together as a Team," "Problem Solving Skills," along with important interview techniques. They were then able to develop a connection between camp counseling and being part of the workforce.

The camp counselors went to camp with a better understanding of how their roles as counselors are preparing them for the roles they will assume in the future. The program concluded by having a follow up interview to discuss camp along with an assessment. The assessment gave the counselors a chance to reflect on what they have

Paulding County was well represented during the Workforce Prep Day at The Ohio State Fair. Gary and Matthew Klopfenstein participated in the Senior Division Judging. They were interviewed for a position as a day camp counselor and created a display expressing what they had learned throughout the camp counselor training program. Gary and Matthew both did an excellent job with their displays and interviews. Matthew won "Outstanding of the Day" with his presentation. The boys both agreed it was a great learning opportunity and they hope to participate in the program again

LOCAL AMERICAN FAMILY INSURANCE AGENT DEVIN SHEETS EARNS DISTINCTION FROM J.D. POWER & ASSOC.

Devin Sheets, an American Family Insurance agent in Van Wert, Ohio, has been recognized for customer satisfaction excellence under the J.D. Power and Associates Distinguished Insurance Agency Program. SM Sheets joins other American Family agents who have demonstrated the highest level of commitment to outstanding customer service.

Sheets has been an agent for American Family since January 2004. His office is located at 118 S. Washington St, Van Wert. He along with his wife Shay and their three kids reside just outside of Grover Hill.

"Industry-leading service is our standard across the board," said Jack Salzwedel, American Family president. "Almost two-thirds of American Family agents made the commitment to achieving this award, and that speaks volumes about their dedication to our customers."

Sheets has qualified for this award for 5 years.

The service excellence distinction was determined through an evaluation process conducted by J.D. Power and Associates. The process consists of a customer satisfaction survey which measures customers' overall experience with their current American Family agent. Agents must meet or exceed the standards measured on a national benchmark established by J.D. Power and Associates' annual auto and home insurance customer satisfaction studies. Only agencies that perform in the top 20 percent of all insurance agencies nationwide based on customer satisfaction surveys are eligible to become a Distinguished Insurance Agency.

WACHTMANN ANNOUNCES VETERANS JOB FAIR

State Representative Lynn Wachtmann (R-Napoleon) has announced that the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve is sponsoring the Veterans Employment and Education Initiative at the Veterans' Memorial Civic and Convention Center in Lima, Ohio, on Thursday, August 18 from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

The focus of this event is to connect employers with service members and their spouses for meaningful employment and educational opportunities. Rooms will be set aside for honing job seeking skills such as interviewing, networking, and writing resumes and cover letters.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for the veterans in our area to connect with employers and showcase their many talents," Wachtmann said. "In these uncertain economic times, it is good to see businesses supporting our service men and women and giving back to those who sacrificed so much for our country."

Agencies from both the State of Ohio and Federal Government, along with County Veterans' Service Offices will be available to assist veterans with questions regarding benefits, disability, education, starting a business, and more. Representatives from area universities and career centers will also be present to explain the programs and benefits available to veterans.

There is no cost to attend this event.

Three Ways To Cope With Back-To-School Stress

PH: 419-258-2000 • FAX: 419-258-1313 • info@westbendnews.net

(NAPSA)—For most parents, the start of a new school year can't come soon enough. Sixty pe cent of moms and dads polled in a new Yahoo! Shine survey (Ipsos OTX MediaCT) say they are extremely excited for summer break to end. But ramping up for the first day of classes can be hec-tic and frustrating, as parents race to gather school supplies while watching their wallets.

The pressure to buy trendy brands is as fierce as ever. Half of the parents surveyed said they buy their children "hip" or "trendy" brands to help them be more "popular" or "cool" at school. And families also say they are gearing up for a busy year of after-school activities. Threequarters of the 2,001 adults surveyed say their children participate in at least two extracurricular activities.

How can families enjoy a fresh start in the Fall while keeping the stress at bay? There are lots of ways technology can help parents manage spending and scheduling. Here are a few tips from Yahoo! Web Life Editor Heather Cabot:

• Organize Your In-box. For starters, you can get a handle on electronic clutter in your in-box by making use of the new Yahoo! Mail service. The new mail format allows you to access the Web tools you use most without leaving your in-box.

Using the latest technology can help you manage the flow of electronic clutter in your in-box—and stay on top of the latest trends.

From tracking your back-toschool purchases with the All My Purchases App to instantly responding to Facebook messages and sending PTA meeting Evites, Yahoo! Mail is the hub for all your e-traffic and will help you earn "Supermom" status.

•Get More Done With Apps. Instead of wasting time searching through a marketplace of hundreds of apps to find the best grocery list maker, calorie ounter or comparison shopping tool, now you can take all the guesswork out of finding the apps you need most. Yahoo AppSpot is a fast, easy way to discover new apps that are just right for you. Each day, you get daily picks based on the apps you already use and that are most important to you. For more information, visit appspot.yahoo.com.

• Don't Miss Out On Deals Don't waste time surfing the entire Web for sales and promotions. Instead, let Yahoo! Deals do the coupon clipping for you. The deal website scours the Web to find coupons, sales and bargains to save you money. At deals.yahoo.com, visitors can find everything from cheap daily deals to codes for online coupons, free grocery coupons and printable local coupons for all their favorite stores and products.

Plus, committed bargain hunters can sign up for deal newsletters from coupon sites, including RetailMeNot.com and FatWallet.com, for instant alerts

According to Cabot, a little organization can go a long way when it comes to organizing your online life, finding bargains and reducing back-to-school stress

Play Well Today And Live Well For Years To Come

(NAPSA)—According to noted experts supported by recent research, playtime actually prepares kids for their futures. Perhaps one of the best places to see the benefits of play in action is in the halls of some of the institutions educating the toymakers of tomorrow. For example, at the Fashion Institute of Technology's Toy Design program, where stu-dents create toys that entertain, educate and inspire kids, Chair Judy Ellis sees the lifelong benefits of play firsthand. "Our incoming students all need to be able to think conceptually and translate those ideas into action. When children have access to toys that respect their imagination and intelligence, it can foster these abilities from an early age.

While all kinds of play can deliver these benefits to children and adults alike, construction play—building with blocks, sticks or bricks—seems to be gaining in popularity in part because of its erceived ability to develop motor skills, problem solving and creative thinking.

To help encourage this new generation of builders, LEGO Systems created LEGO Master Builder Academy, a new program

Play provides important lessons for youngsters' future success that teaches the techniques of model designers via a yearlong toy subscription. Children learn successful building methods such as locking and model stability while they play; at the same time, they learn transferable skills such as how to conceptualize, design and create on their own This curriculum has been carefully developed to strengthen, test and reward core building skills by an elite group of designers known as the LEGO Master Builders. They hold one of two important jobs: They either design the many LEGO sets sold each year, or they design and build all the spectacular, one-of-a-kind models on display around the world. "The No. 1 question I hear from parents and to build like a Master Builder? says Erik Varszegi, a Master Builder based in the U.S.A. Varszegi offers parents these mba.com, to help teach kids about design and building in order to bring their ideas to life, all while having fun: • Put it on paper—he uses special graph paper to design models, but any graph paper or lined paper will help kids translate their ideas into reality—whether it's building a sandcastle or making a one-of-a-kind cake, it's easier to translate scale and proportion once you've seen it on • Assemble the elementsgather your bricks, ingredients art supplies, whatever pieces you need to make your creation; have them in one place so you can plan your approach and make any adjustments before you dive in. • Make mistakes—remember, you're experimenting and creating, so there's no such thing as a "right" answer. Take chances and keep a fresh eye on what you're making. Some of the world's best inventions have been a result of a
