for Robert to want to continue to serve the people and to take on a new challenge. "I have always believed that government should be accountable to the people, able to perform its duties effectively, and be fiscally responsible with your tax dollars. I pledge to take all issues seriously and promise to represent the people of Paulding County with honesty, integrity and commitment. I have a record of saying what I mean and doing what I say.

I am offering the people of point," states Boyd.

Boyd continues, "I am not a politician with a long list of promises, I do not claim to know all the issues nor do I promise to be able to solve all the problems immediately. I believe this election should be about the people of Paulding county, and my goal is to visit everyone in the county during my campaign, to hear and to learn their concerns, and if elected, to represent them with determination and perseverance by addressing every issue head on to find real solutions."

Robert and his wife currently live in Paulding and have five (grown) children. COMMUNITY SUCCESS BRINGS NEW TOURNAMENT OFFERING TO ANTWERP

The annual success of the Antwerp Boys and Girls 5th and 6th Grade Basketball Tournaments, and the hospitality shown by the Antwerp Community, has helped bring yet another tournament to Antwerp. On March 3rd the Antwerp Manor House Gymnasium will be the host site of a new 5th Grade Boys Basketball Tournament. Some of the new participants this time around will be from Archbold, Bryan, Tinora, and two teams from Defiance St. John Lutheran. They will be joining Crestview, Hicksville and host Antwerp. Games will begin at 8:30 a.m. and run through Saturday evening.

This eight team tournament will be a good test run for the upcoming NAYS on April 13-15, 2012 tournament that will be played in the two gyms at the Antwerp High School and the gym at the Manor House. As many as 50 teams could be hosted in the three gyms. The help from the Antwerp community and local businesses make these opportunities possible by providing a reason to bring people into town and offering them a reason to want to return. Please welcome our guests and show them why Antwerp is such a great community.

SEPARATION OF POLITICS AND FAITH?

By: Regan Clem, Riverside Christian Church

We often hear in our society that our spiritual beliefs shouldn't influence our politics. That view can only come from people who have superficial beliefs (beliefs that they intellectually assent to but practically avoid) or none at all. I don't mean that to be offensive to those who separate their faith from their politics, but let's be honest. If your beliefs don't influence the way that you view the world and the way that the world should operate, then your beliefs are not really beliefs; they are just part of some religious ritual that you give intellectual assent to. Our deeply held spiritual beliefs will influence our politics. They aren't contained in some fictitious fairy tale section of our minds. Instead, they transform the way we live and view the world. If we really believe the spiritual things we claim to believe, then those beliefs will permeate our entire life. If we compartmentalize the practical applications of our spiritual beliefs to our church life or our life around a certain group of people, then we really don't believe the beliefs that we claim to believe; we just give them lip service. Authentic belief influences the way we live, everywhere we find ourselves living. That is what genuine, true belief is.

The truth of the matter is that our beliefs always influence our politics. The question is, "What do we really believe?" Now this doesn't mean that we should have to spout off about Scripture in the political arena. What it means is that our politics are shaped by our beliefs, and those beliefs should be able to hold their own without referring back to Scripture with those who do not believe in Scripture. Truth doesn't need Scripture to show that it is true. It is the truth. It is in Scripture because Scripture contains the truth, but the truth is not confined to Scripture.

SCRIPTURE OF THE WEEK

"An anxious heart weighs a man down, but a kind word cheers him up."

Jesus teaches us to love our enemies (Matthew 5:44). All too often our society's fervent nationalism will spur us to dehumanize our enemies and harm them. Jesus went so far as to say that we are to love those who persecute us. So these enemies are doing harm to us, yet we are still supposed to love them. This might be difficult to iron out politically, but we must always remember that we are called to be faithful, not effective.

That is just one of the many issues where following Jesus criss-crosses with society. I touch on a few more at my post at www.regansravings.blogspot.com if you want to read them.

We must make sure that in the process of being politically alive, we never compromise important beliefs. The ends never justify the means. However, that expression is often used as an excuse to be an obnoxious jerk, one who is unwavering and unwilling to compromise. We must realize that it is better to head in the right direction than to hide in our ivory towers, be self-righteous, and make no progress for the betterment of those who need help. We understand that this world will never be what God intended it to be prior to Jesus' second coming, but we also recognize that striving for His ideal is what will make life better in the here and now.

We must be vigilant that we never lose our focus on Jesus in the mire of politics. This nation will not be transformed into what God wants it to be through political action. The key problem is a problem of the heart. But that does not mean that a follower of Jesus cannot be involved in shaping laws to promote the common good. We might hear the retort, "You can't legislate morality." But that is nonsense. Every law is a moral teaching, even in a secular nation.

When talking about politics, we must never forget that our primary witness for Jesus is our not our political stances; it's our life together as a church. The government is not the salvation of the world; Jesus is. And He reveals Himself to the world through the local church. We must love one another and be the light of the world that we were intended to be.

CONSIDERING THE OTHER GUY'S POINT OF VIEW

By: Pastor Joel DeSelm, Woodburn Missionary Church

An interesting article crossed my desk about a missionary in northern Burma who translated the scriptures into the Lisu language. After finishing the monumental task, the missionary was to return home, so he left a young man with the task of teaching this Burmese tribe to read using the new translation of the Bible.

When the missionary returned six months later, he found the three students and the teacher seated around a table with the scriptures opened in front of the teach-

"Have you been learning how to read?" asked the missionary. "Oh, yes," they replied, thrilled to be able to impress him with their new

When each of the students read aloud for the missionary, each left the Bible exactly where it was in front of the young teacher. The man on the left read it sideways, the man on the right read it sideways, and the man across from the teacher read it upside-down.

Since they always occupied the same chairs, that's how each had learned to read, and that's how each thought the language was written.

Interesting, isn't it? We, too, can be like that. When we learn something from only one perspective, how easy it is to think that's the ONLY perspective.

I don't know about you, but I'm often a prisoner to "my-way-is-obviouslythe-best-way" syndrome. It's downright tough to admit that there may be more than one god way to solve a problem or address an issue. So often our pride prevents us from considering other people's perspectives and points of view.

We become blinded by our own prejudices and upbringing and, therefore, become resistant to new ideas, fresh approaches, or unique methods of doing something.

The solution? Flexibility. Remain teachable. Be a big enough person to hear out other people's ideas and perspectives on the problem. Don't get so uptight if YOUR idea isn't the one adopted or the method approved. Recognize that just maybe the other guy could be right. Or at least have a better idea.

In the book of Proverbs in the Old Testament we are told "Plane fail for lack of counsel, but with many advisors they succeed." In a nutshell, what Solomon is stating is that none of us has omniscience and a complete corner on the market when it comes to problem solving.

Believe it or not, other people occasionally DO come up with some pretty good ideas. Be willing to admit it and defer. After all, the goal is to solve the problem isn't it? Sometimes it's good even to change seats to assume a different perspective on the same truth.

Maybe today you find yourself in a logjam or a stale mate with your spouse, one of your children, or someone at work. Honestly, ask yourself... "Am I stubbornly trying only to look at this thing from MY point of view, or am I truly being open to what's right, regardless of whose

RECIPES FROM A GREAT-GRANDMA

By: Sue Knapp

This recipe was a staple at all our holiday dinners with my family in Kokomo. My step-mother always made potato salad, oyster dressing along with bread dressing, corn from the garden and noodles. She came from a farm family in Illinois and cook she did! I remember going to Illinois for Thanksgiving and her mom would be cooking chunks of pumpkin for pumpkin pie. All this was before good country cooking became not-so-good for you. Oh, for the good old days!

My dad would always make us biscuits and gravy for breakfast, and no other biscuits and gravy even comes close to Dad's. Anyway, all these are memories to savor, it keeps us close.

This week I am featuring my step-mom's cheesecake. After a big holiday meal this hits the spot—not so heavy, but still dessert.

STOCKING YOUR POND

By: Jim Lopshire, Extension Educator

Most commercial hatcheries offer many species of fish that a pond owner can purchase for stocking a pond. A number of these species are better suited for a pond environment than others, and some can actually cause problems.

Four fish species that do well when stocked in ponds are the largemouth bass, bluegill, redear sunfish, and channel catfish. These species are successful because the pond environment is the type of habitat where the largemouth bass, bluegill, and redear sunfish evolved. They do not do well in large open water systems and in cool water habitats. Channel catfish are generalists, meaning they can do well in a wide variety of habitats, and do very well in warm water. Most typical pond fish communities are composed of only largemouth bass and bluegills. Channel catfish are stocked into about 10% of ponds and redear sunfish less so. Redear sunfish are becoming popular because of their tendency to control snails. Fathead minnows are often stocked as a supplemental food source for largemouth bass but really should not be stocked once bluegills are reproducing on a consistent basis. By feeding largemouth bass a steady diet of fathead minnows will reduce their predation on small bluegills, which will lead to slower bluegill growth and possibly stunting. Stocking fathead minnows can be considered in a new pond where bass may struggle to feed for a year or

There are number of other predator fish species that people want in their ponds, like walleye, northern pike, and smallmouth bass. These are considered to be cool water fish species, and do poorly in ponds and small lakes due to warm summer water temperatures and a lack of suitable spawning

Both crappies and yellow perch are often stocked in ponds. They rarely do well and crappies can actually ruin the fish community. They can also jeopardize survival of bass and bluegill fingerlings because they are essentially fish eaters once they reach six or so inches in length. Yellow perch eat the same prey types as bluegills, which leads to competition problems for food.

There are undesirable fish species. Green sunfish, bullheads, and common carp are all species that should not be stocked. They are prolific spawners, compete with desirable species, and the latter two can result in turbid muddy water. Once they predominate, renovation is the only way to reestablish a desirable fish community.

If you are thinking of stocking or re-stocking your pond, the Paulding SWCD will be hosting a fish sale until April 20. The fish will be delivered on May 1. If you have any questions, call the Paulding SWCD office at 419.399.4771.

THE FELLOW RODDER

By: Mike McKeever

This week's featured car is a 1926 Ford Model T coupe and it comes from Antwerp resident, Brooks Pendergrast.

The Model T was first made in 1909 and the last one in 1927 with a total of 15 million made. Many people think that you could only get the Model T in the color black. That's not true— 1909-1913 they were available in several colors. From 1913-1925, you could have any color as long as it was black, and by 1926-27 there were different colors again. Brooks' Model T was a deep channel green with black fenders, running boards and wire spoke wheels. The wire wheels were standard on the

The left pedal is a forward low gear. The harder you press it, the faster you go; you have to press down the whole time you are in low gear. If you want high gear, you put the hand lever all the way forward, let your foot off of the left pedal and it jumps into high gear, at a maximum 26-27's. Wood spoke rims were an option. This coupe would have sold for $520.00 new in 1926.

A historian told Brooks that the quaint little towns were all spaced between bigger cities around the Model T era. See, some of the Model T's came with a water pump and some did not. So you would drive 20-30 miles and stop for a coffee break, get gas and let your car cool down. Then you drive another 20-30 miles stop and get lunch, drive another 20-30 miles and another coffee break, 20-30 more eat dinner and stay for the night. Look on the map and you will see a lot of towns spaced around that 20-30 mile range!

This car was handed down from Brooks' father James Sr. Brooks and his sons (Tad and Scott) intend that someday Brooks' grandson Brandon will own

James Sr. was born in 1926 and that is the reason he wanted this year of car. In 1970 Jim went to Memphis TN to buy it for $600. He brought it home and forgot about it until 1990, at that time Jim went to a company called Gas Light in Urbana, Ohio and bought new tires and tubes and then forgot about it again until the year 2000. At that time Jim's sons (Jim, David and Brooks) got it out and started working on it. David was working in town for Dave Feasby (Boot) where he sand-blasted and painted the wheels for the car. The wheels were finally on the car. Jim got the seat from a VW Jetta at the junkyard, the newly acquired seat was much nicer then the upside down buckets they were using to sit on. Mr. Larson brought life back to the little coupe after some rewiring and cleaning. This is how the car was shown for many

Now if you have never looked inside a Model T you will find that the throttle is There are three pedals on the floor and a hand lever on the far left. The hand lever in the speed of 35mph. If you want reverse you put hand lever in center position and push on the middle pedal—same thing here, the harder you push the faster you go-let off and you stop moving. The last far right pedal is a mechanical trans brake. Can you just imagine setting the throttle and trying to drive this thing in a crowd? That is the reason James Sr. never drove this coupe. He was worried that if someone was to walk out in front of him that his first intent would be to press in the clutch, which should be the far left pedal, but in this case it is low gear and you lunge forward. That just terrified him to no end. I tell you, I watched Brooks drive this and you really have to pay attention to what you're doing; however, back in 1926 I guess it was better then your alternative

Brooks tells me that Chuck Wiedman told him it would make a great little street rod; John Tuto also looked at the little '26 coupe with a street rodder's gleam in his eye. Brooks plans to restore the car as money allows. It will stay pretty much original, just not down to the detail some go, that way 100 years from now if his family wants to restore it back to the original, they will be

After spending a little time talking with Brooks about this car and what it meant to his father, I can definitely tell he shares the same love for it that his father did. It is so nice to see that some things are just not for sale and will always have special meaning in the family just like this little '26

AN INN ALONG THE MAUMEE RIVER

By: Stan Jordan

I have before me the book called The Maumee River in 1835 by Louis A. Simmons, from the journal of William C. Holgate. A very interesting book about Mr. Holgate and a couple other fellows making a journey from Toledo down the Maumee to Fort Wayne and then on to Huntington.

As they came along the river into Crane Township we pick up this story about places they spent the night.

They first talk about a Thomas P. Quick. I think his was not an Inn, but more like a big house with four bedrooms.

I guess people would let travelers spend the night inside for a couple reasons. They were glad to hear the news of the outside world and to pick up a little extra change. This Mr. Quick settled in Crane Township in 1822 and opened a trading post east of New Rochester. It was more for trading with the Indians than a store. Some of the Indians had been relocated and some stayed.

This Thomas Quick was a bachelor and he owned and sold land all around that area in the 1820's. I guess he was the first elected Justice of the Peace for Crane Township.

History doesn't pin-point where this store was but they hint it was a little east of Rochester about where that cemetery is. His store was already open in 1826. It is reported that Paulding County was one of the better areas for the hunters and trappers in

The first Citizens Store in Crane Township was opened by 1829 by Horatio N. Curtis in what was called Craneville. Now that was in Section 10 of Crane Township on the north side of the Maumee across from New Rochester. His journal shows that he traded mostly with the Indians.

He had a large house and bedroom space, and sometime along about here he got married. He died in 1836 and his estate was valued at about

There were a number of people along the river at that time named Spurrier. In those years there was an Inn or maybe just a log home.

There was a Reason Spurrier who sold some acreage to a Fred Spurrier in the very southwest corner of Section 23 Carryall Township. I guess that is where the Inn was located. As near as I can tell by my references it is the plot by the river that is around by Jack and Junita Carr on the north end of the Harmann Road.

He was one of the first settlers in Carryall Township in 1824 or 1825. He was also the first Treasurer of the Township, that position is now called the Fiscal Officer.

Later on some men from this area had to appear in court at Fort Wayne over a Fanning Mill deal. But why I wanted to mention that here is because they used the mailing address of Cranesville, Ohio, Williams County, Ohio. At this time there was a post office about two miles east of Antwerp that they used to call Paulding-Williams and then Mr. Spurrier was postmaster so at that time it was probably in his house at the north end of the now Harmann Road.

The post office was officially named Pauldingville in 1837 and was later named the Antwerp Post Office in 1842. We have talked about this be-

SAM RIVERS, INDIAN AGENT CHAPTER 4: SAM & CALLIE AT KEARNEY

By: Stan Jordan

Well, we are still snowed in here at Gottenberg Pony Express Station. If you will remember it started a freezing rain, sleet and then snow last Monday about noon. We finally got here about dark and the Express Rider, Luke, finally got here about four hours late, he had us all wor-

We have been here Monday night, all day Tuesday and this is Wednesday but it is trying to melt outside. All is covered with ice and snow.

We just sit and talk and drink coffee and Jim had some sassafras bark and he made some tea and we play some cards. Callie is very deft with the cards. She watched the gamblers when she worked at the hotel and she showed us a lot of neat card tricks and about ten different ways to play solitaire.

This is Thursday, January 14 and we are finally leaving Gottenberg and heading east on the Oregon Trail to Ft. Laramie. The ice is trying to melt and if the sun comes out that will also help.

Luke Lucas, the Pony Express rider has already left. As soon as he could go on the trail he left. Be ready to ride that was his outlook.

We loaded up all our gear and thanked the station agent and his wife for all the favors and lodging. We got to know each other pretty well.

The station agent and his wife had come out of Pennsylvania for his health and they took the job as station agent. He said you get four types of weather here and they can be nice or maybe not so nice.

We are going east out of Gottenburg and headed for Lexington. There is an express stop there also. Then it will be two days travel and we are in Fort Kearney, our destination.

We will stop at the Bald Knobb Pony Express Station and then into Kearney to-

Well, we are here at Kearney and they sort of expected us as I am supposed to start work on February 1st.

Jim took all the animals into the stable and had the smithy fix them up right for Jim would go on east to Illinois and I would be out on the

We planned on being here a few days. We all went into the hotel and got our rooms and had our gear stowed

The three travelers met down at the dining room at the corner table where the boys used to sit. The fare for the day was chicken and dumplings, cooked carrots and bread pudding and plenty of coffee.

The Charge of Quarters came in and said that I was to see the General at 10:00 a.m.

We talked well into the night because we could sleep in the morning. We all were ushered in to the General's office and the usual hand shakes and greetings went on.

February 1, 1852. There was the usual papers and pamphlets about the job and other dos and don'ts. I told the general, "If I ever have to send a runner to you, he will carry this totem I have. Then you will know that I sent him. I'm sure that we will have some I asked the General if he

"They will also load your two burner oil stoves and horses along with some extra shovels and axes and some lumber for shelves and the like." On the morning of the 1st of February Jim said his goodbyes to everyone and turned and went east to Independence, MO and from there on east to Moline, IL. His wife lives there and his son, if he is not back east on the music circuit. Jim is pretty sure he can get a job at John Deere because he had a good record when he worked there before.

Callie and I said our goodbyes and headed out through the main gate. The other wagon with four soldiers and food for the animals was right behind us making a little wagon

Next week: On the Trail to Broken Bow Agency

A note from Stan: There was two Fort Kearney's in Nebraska Territory. They were both named after Colonel Stephen W. Kearney.

The second fort was built on the Oregon Trail and was a very important stop over and rest area for the wagons going out west for about 30 years. It was a busy and safe area when the Union Pacific Railroad was laid in 1867.

This area was plenty safe from 1846 until about 1860. Then the Sioux and Cheyenne tribes raided a lot of the settlers and wagon trains. Sometimes the soldiers from Kearney escorted the wagons.

It was 317 miles from Independence and about three miles west of a place called Grand Island.

In Lieutenant Woodbury's Journal in the year of 1849, 4,000 wagons went by going to the gold strike in California. By 1865 all the Indian trouble had drifted on westward.

But in our time here it was a safe haven and supply post for many eastern tender feet.

Two young boys were spending the night at their grandparents' house. At bedtime, the two boys knelt beside their beds to say their prayers.

The youngest one began praying at the top of his lungs, "I pray for a new bicycle. I pray for a new Nintendo. I pray for a new DVD player...

The older brother leaned over and nudged the younger brother and said, "Why are you shouting your prayers? God isn't deaf."

To which the little brother replied, "No, but Gramma

ANTWERP VETERANS BOOK

Did you know that there is an effort in the Antwerp community to publish a book to further honor our veterans to whom we owe our freedoms?

Did you know that there is a committee that has been working hard on this project for the last year? Did you know that each veteran, regardless of length of time served or where, may have their photo and a 150 word biography about themselves published in the book for free? Did you know that if the veteran is deceased a family member may submit information for them? If you have a positive answer to the above questions, the committee probably already has your information. If you did not know the answers or were not aware of the book project you still have time to get your information to the committee. Looking over the biographies that have been submitted, the committee realizes that several of our veterans. both living and deceased, are conspicuously absent. We do hope that you will at least submit your basic information for the book. VETS-Continuous The Honor Committee did sign a contract of M.T. Publishing in March of 2011 to have a book published. The original deadline was October of 2011, that was extended to January of 2012. That deadline has been extended to March 30, 2012. This will be the last extension! The committee needs the continued support from the community to make this the book that they know it can be. Several businesses and families have purchased patron pages. Many people have ordered and pre-paid for books. It's not too late for you to be For more details or to sub-

HEROIC TEACHER OF THE YEAR AWARD RECOGNIZES EXCELLENCE

Albert Einstein once said, "It is the supreme art of the teacher to awaken joy in creative expression and knowledge." Keeping with the spirit of this idea, Heroic Teacher Press and UWrite Touch announce a contest to honor and reward outstanding teachers. The contest is specifically intended to recognize teachers who have distinguished themselves within their community through generosity and commitment while addressing the needs of students before their own.

The Heroic Teacher of the Year Award was inspired by the award-winning novel, Leave No Child Behind, by Dr. Randy Overbeck. The book tells a story of heroism, when a small-town teacher is confronted by an act of terrorism that threatens her classroom. "After many years as an educator, I hope, as an author, to bring to the forefront those teachers who have the willingness to stand up before kids and believe in kids who may not even believe in themselves," Overbeck says.

To be eligible for the South Heroic Teacher of the Year, a teacher must be currently working with students in a K-12 school in the states of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio. Nominations can be submitted by a colleague, an administrator, a student, a parent, or community member, but the teacher may not nominate him/herself. One winner from each region will be selected and notified during Teacher Appreciation Week, May 7th through the 11th, 2012.

The contest is sponsored by Heroic Teacher Press, an independent publishing company based in Lebanon, Ohio, and UWriteTouch, an educational technology company. "The mission of Heroic Teacher Press is to raise the status of teachers in America and all their efforts are focused on that goal," says Overbeck. The small press is also working with local booksellers to find and recognize outstanding teachers.

As an award-winning educator himself as well as the publisher's lead author, Overbeck will present each award personally during a public event at the winning teacher's home school. Besides recognition for exceptional accomplishments as a teacher, each winner will receive a $200 gift card to their favorite bookstore and an Engage Wireless LCD; an exciting new interactive teaching tool for the classroom, courtesy of UWriteTouch.

Nomination forms and complete contest rules are available online at www.heroicteacherpress.com or by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Attn: Heroic Teacher Contest, 789 Lake Bluff Ct., Lebanon, OH 45036. All nominations must be submitted by US Mail postmarked no later than April 15, 2012.

RAIDER WRESTLERS: CLEMENS, TEMPLE TO THE SCHOTT!

On Saturday, February 25th two local wrestlers' sacrifices, hard work, and determination finally paid off. Wayne Trace wrestlers, Kameran Clemens and Sawyer Temple, would both be guaranteed a spot on the OHSAA wrestling state championships bracket. This bracket holds the names of the top 16 wrestlers in the state in their respective division. 140 wrestlers competed at the LCC sectional to earn the right to wrestle at districts at Kettering Fairmount in Dayton. 423 wrestlers fed this district from four sectional tournaments. The top four in each weight class will be wrestling at the Schottenstein Center in Columbus starting March 1st for the title of state champion.

When asked how they felt when the reality had set in of their accomplishment, "It is a dream come true," and "This is awesome," was echoed by both wrestlers. Coach Clemens asked if all of the hard work and sacrifice was worth it in the end and both wrestlers agreed that it was. "Most people don't realize that a typical day for a wrestler is getting up at 5:30 a.m. and going in for morning practice to get your metabolism going. Then comes the calorie counting and weighing of everything that you eat or drink. Next, is regular practice after school for two hours. Finally, it is a hot shower and off to home, but they are not done. A quick visit with the family and they head out to the YMCA for another two or three hours of work followed by another hot shower. Now, and only now, are they ready to go home and relax and prepare for the next days wrestling contest," stated Coaches Clemens and Stabler.

The kids make so many sacrifices to achieve their ultimate goal of earning the right to wrestle at the Schott. "Most of them spend Thanksgiving and Christmas eating only a portion, if any, of the holiday meal. When everyone is having parties at school and enjoying all the sweet treats, wrestlers are often passing on these things. Wrestling will teach a young man willpower and what it is to sacrifice for a larger purpose," commented Clemens. "In the end, you just hope it is all worth it.'

Sawyer Temple first put on a singlet at the age of six and began wrestling for the Paulding Wrestling Club. Eventually, he would find himself in a red, white, and blue singlet at the WT Wrestling Club. Sawyer would work hard at the sport and would begin to establish himself as a dominate wrestler in the area. He would wrestle his way to being a two-time GMC champion. He would qualify for districts both his freshman and sophomore years but, as they say, the third time is a charm.

Sawyer would be the runner-up at the LCC Sectional and would take his 31-7 record to districts. He would start with a solid win over a wrestler from Covington, but then would be on the wrong end of a match with a number one seed from Brookeville. Wrestling in the consolation bracket, he would better wrestlers from Madeira and LCC. Sawyer's next test would come from the number one seeded Versailles' wrestler. With this win, he was guaranteed a chance to wrestle in Columbus. He would win convincingly, 10-4. Sawyer would cap his district meet with a feat no other Raider wrestler has accomplished. He would not only win his finals match placing him 3rd at Districts, but would do so by pinning another number one seeded wrestler from Reading.

Kameran Clemens started wrestling at a young age as well. This sport would not come as naturally to Kameran as some, but he would put in more time than any other wrestler at Wayne Trace. His work ethic and determination would pay off as Kameran would be the first ever two-time State qualifier for the red, white, and blue. Kameran would begin to compile a list of accomplishments as a Raider wrestler second to none. He would become a four-time District qualifier, two-time State qualifier, and is currently tied for the most wins ever by a WT wrestler.

Kameran would place 2nd at LCC. Taking a 35-5 record into Districts, Kameran would simply put up win after win on his way to very solid runner-up finish. First, he would knock off a wrestler from Dixie. Next. he would face a number one seed from Mechanicsburg. Kameran would pin this wrestler only to face another number one seed from Madeira. Kameran would win this match, 5-2. Finally, he would face another number one seed from Lima Bath. In a very close and controversial match, Kameran would fall just short by dropping the match, 9-8.

Coach Stabler pointed out that most of the critics hadn't given the Raiders much of a shot. The leading critic didn't have Sawyer or Kameran placing in the top four, and the other critic thought that they may be able to scratch out a 4th place finish, but it would be unlikely. Both coaches were quick to state that "Those are only opinions on paper. They went out and simply wrestled awesome. They maintained their composure, wrestled smart, took advantage of situations they could, and finished better than anyone had predicted," stated Coach Stabler. In speaking with both families and coaches, Lawrence Temple may have said it the best. "We always assumed that he (Sawyer) would make it, but you just never know. It is so difficult, and anything can happen. We have seen how hard he has worked, and, we are just so proud of him." Both families were unable to express in words how they felt at the moment they knew their son had accomplished his ultimate goal; however, I found one thing interesting. All of them said it was emotionally overwhelming. "Grown men and tough wrestlers crying because they were just simply choked up in the moment," was how Lawrence described the emotional scene after both wrestlers won their matches ensuring them a chance at "I think we may have finally broken the mold at Wavne Trace. We sent three wrestlers to State since 2006. Corbin Griffiths was the first, then Lucas Jacomet, and Kameran last year. Now, this year we are sending two in one year which is obviously a record for WT," stated Coach Clemens. The Raider wrestling team qualified six to Districts, four of them being underclassmen. Clemens continued, "I would expect to improve upon that number next year and I will continue to raise the bar at Wayne Trace."

Discussing wrestling in general in Paulding County, Coach Clemens pointed out that the county continues to improve. Antwerp had its first District qualifier in Jarrett Bute and he was able to win a match as a freshman, which is no easy feat at Districts. "He will be a solid wrestler for Antwerp and their program, under Jeremy Kosch, will only improve," quipped Clemens. Paulding had Tyler Ash qualify for State and Taylor Dietrich would have had a great shot had it not been for his accident. "Josh Nielson is really doing a great job up there with his wrestlers," added Clemens. Paulding County is really starting to have some quality wrestlers. "I would love to see all three county schools be represented at the Schott in one year. That would really make a statement about wrestling in Paulding County," stated Clemens.

Sawyer, 36-8, and Kameran, 38-6, will take their respective records into the Schottenstein Center on March 1st. They will not be favored by the critics, but after all that is just opinions and paper. "Anything can happen at the Schott in March. That is why it is determined by wrestling and not opinions," stated Coach Clemens. They will, however, be the favorites of the Raider wrestling fans in attendance. Wrestling will begin at 3:00 p.m. for both of these young men and their

WOODLAN TAKES WIN AT ANTWERP

For their part, Antwerp performed well the 1st half of the Woodlan game. The boys were able to get around Woodlan's defense and score, but Woodlan was able to shut this down the second half, presenting a very close match at the end of the game. PAULDING EXEMPTED VILLAGE SCHOOLS MARCH 2012 NEWSLETTER

Dear Friends of the Paulding Exempted Village Schools,

March is a very busy month for our students. Winter sports are winding down and the students participating in spring sports are gearing up for a new season. Our seniors are busy planning for their future by finalizing plans for college, work, or the military as they begin the last quarter of their high school career. The sophomores will be taking the Ohio Graduation Tests beginning March 12. I am confident that our staff has prepared the students well for these high stake tests. If you would like more information about preparing for these tests, check out this great Ohio Department of Education website at http://portal.success-ode-state-oh- us.info, and click on OGT.

PEVS is proud to announce a new AP Virtual Grant received by the district. Through this grant, our high school students will be able to take 14 AP courses not currently of-fered in the high school. The courses will be taken online and represent a unique opportunity for access to high level courses while interacting online with students around the country. If you would like more information about available courses, please contact Chelsea Koester at 419-399-4646, extension

The Honeywell[©] Instant Alert System has been very helpful for keeping families informed of delays, cancellations, and event changes. Please keep your contact information up to date in the system. I encourage everyone to make sure the box in your account is checked to receive High Importance alerts. This is the method of communication we will use if there is an emergency at school. If you have a child in our school district and are not receiving Instant Alert messages, please contact Cindy Kauser at 419-399-4656, extension 1512.

I appreciate the cooperation of our students, parents and community as we continue to work together to improve the education our students receive at Paulding Exempted Village Schools.

BWC SETTING A POSI-TIVE EXAMPLE

Guest Column from Representative Lynn Wacht-

Maintaining a strong, prosperous economy requires a healthy workforce. Recent changes in the Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation have been designed and implemented with the goal of ensuring our state's workers remain healthy and are able to quickly return to work should they get injured. Targeted cutbacks within the bureau have relieved both private businesses and local governments. A fourpercent reduction in average base rates has saved private businesses about $65 million in premiums and local governments $22 million. Additionally over the past year, the BWC dialed back its budget by 12 percent and in doing so saved an additional $80 million. Taking these vital steps will help the BWC remain solvent for years to come, which will be especially important during subsequent economic hard-

Besides granting more attention to spending its money efficiently, the BWC has also intensified its focus on issues of fraud, which is an obvious obstacle to properly administering benefits and services. Some of the positive results from this newly directed attention included a total of 95 indictments and 94 convictions in 2011, as well as the discovery of $44.37 million in savings for the State Insurance Fund.

There have also been a number of recent programs added to the Bureau of Workers' Compensation, designed toward encouraging businesses to make workplace safety a top priority. One initiative spearheaded within the past year was the Wellness Grant Program. Through this four-year program, employers can be eligible to receive $15,000 to put towards starting their own employee health and wellness programs. This will help businesses deal with health threats that are becoming common in the workplace, including chronic diseases and even obesity.

Additionally, Destination: Excellence was designed to improve return-to-work rates by incentivizing employers to create risk management plans that address safety and prevention and returning injured workers back to the job more quickly. By encouraging employers to be better prepared for potential problems in the workplace and to implement preventive measures can help to reduce the strain of managing costs down the road.

Clearly, many of the changes taken by the Bureau of Workers' Compensation have centered on the idea of making individual businesses more knowledgeable and preparing them to take the necessary steps to maintain a healthy workforce. In a time when reducing costs, while still providing necessary services, is known reality, the BWC is a great example for other agencies

SELL INVESTMENTS FOR THE RIGHT REA-SONS

Financial Focus by: Gabe Pollock, Edward Jones Advisor

It's important to understand which investments to own, and when to buy them. But you should also know when it's time to sell an investment — and why.

Unfortunately, many people sell investments for the wrong reasons. Some people want the money to purchase so-called "hot" investments, even if these new investments aren't appropriate for their needs. Others own investments that have lost value, and fearing further losses, they decide to sell — thereby violating the oldest rule of investing: "Buy low and sell high."

These types of behavior can lead to at least two major problems. First, if you're constantly selling investments, you'll likely incur fees, commissions and taxes that can erode any returns you did manage to achieve. And second, by frequently selling off your investments and buying new ones, you'll find it difficult to follow the type of consistent, long-term financial strategy that's essential to help you work toward your goals.

If you shouldn't sell investments to find quick gains or to avoid losses that may not even occur, when should you

You might want to sell: If your goals have changed — You bought certain investments because you thought they would help you make progress toward your objectives. But over time, your goals may change, so in response, you may need to sell some investments and use the money to purchase new ones that are more suitable for your new goals. For example, early in your career, you might have benefited from owning investments that offered high potential for growth, but as you near retirement, you may need to shift some — but certainly not all — of your growth-oriented vehicles to income-producing ones.

If the investments themselves change — You might have bought a stock because you liked the company's products, business plan or management team. If any of these factors change significantly, though, you might need to reevaluate your ownership of this investment.

If you need to rebalance your portfolio — You may have decided that your investment portfolio should be composed of specific percentages of stocks, bonds and "cash" instruments. But due to changes in the value of your investments, these percentages can shift somewhat, resulting in a portfolio that no longer reflects your goals and risk tolerance. If that happens, you'll need to rebalance your holdings, which may require you to sell some of your investments.

If an investment has chronically underperformed - Sometimes, an investment simply doesn't perform as well as you had hoped. When this happens, you may be better off by selling the investment and using the money to pursue new opportunities. However, don't rush to judgment. Before you sell an underperforming investment, try to determine why it hasn't done well. Is it because the market as a whole has slumped? If so, your investment could rebound when the market does. Or are there separate factors, unique to this investment, that have caused its problems? If the investment's fundamentals and prospects still look good, you might want to simply give it time to prove its worth. By knowing when you should hold an investment, and when you shouldn't, you can avoid costly mistakes and help improve your chances for long-term investment success. So think carefully before putting up the "For Sale" sign on your investments.

WINTER WEATHER QUIZ ANSWERS REVEALED

By: Josh Steiner

Finally, after four weeks, I have written the answers to that quiz I wrote at the beginning of February. It seems as if winter did show up with a few glimpses here and there. Other than that, it felt almost as if we were living in the Deep South during the winter. In fact, according to the National Weather Service, this winter was the seventh warmest winter on record in the Fort Wayne area and the second warmest on record at South Bend. Even with the record warmth across the area, snowfall is still several inches above normal for the season at Fort Wayne. At South Bend, due to the scarcity of lake effect snow events this winter, snowfall has been well below normal for the winter (it has improved since mid-January). Without further ado, the answers to those questions.

1. Which type of front was most likely to produce a winter storm, such as an ice storm or snow storm? The answer is technically B. Occluded front, but you could also answer C. Warm front, because both types of fronts tend to produce major winter storms. With a warm front, warm, moist air gliding over a thick surface dome of cold air, causes the warm air to cool, producing clouds and precipitation. In an occluded front, warm air is lifted over the front so quickly and forcefully (due to the presence of a low pressure system, and because of how steep the front is), that the mid and upper levels cool rapidly, allowing for the formation of heavy snow bands and sometimes thunder snow. Remember, the winter storms do not usually form ahead of a cold front, because the cold front tends to draw warm, moist air northward, eliminating the chance for frozen precipitation. 2. The most efficient type of snow crystal for snow growth is a type of crystal called the dendrite. This is an incredibly small snowflake and is the source for the common snowflake shape of a hexagon with protrusions. This type of crystal forms in a layer called the Snow Growth Zone, which is located where ever the layer of -12 to -18 degrees Celsius exists in the mid levels. When forecasting, meteorologists will look at this layer on models to determine whether significant snow accumulations are possible.

3. Usually for freezing rain to reach the surface as freezing rain without freezing or becoming warmer, the layer of below freezing temperatures should be less than 100 feet and the surface temperature of the ground and other objects preferably well below freezing. You will usually see a freezing rain event after a major arctic outbreak of cold air moves out of the region. In this type of situation, the ground is so cold that any precipitation, whether it is liquid or solid, will freeze on contact with the ground.

4. The type of situation that a meteorologist would look for in advance of a major winter storm, is C. or Time: Noon. Current temperature: 23 degrees and steady. Increasing northeast winds under a dense overcast of altostratus clouds. This the correct answer because if northeast winds are increasing and a thick overcast is presence, more than likely, this means a strong low pressure system is approaching the area, and because of the cold temperatures, precipitation will most likely be all snow, unless the current conditions change rapidly in a short period of time. In the other answers, such as the one with current temperature at negative ten and clear skies and windy conditions, this would mean a storm system is moving away and arctic air is moving into the region and temperatures will likely become colder because of clear skies. In the example of the severe

5. This question is more of an opinion, since driving conditions are different for every driver. "What kind of driving conditions will cause vour car to slide more across the road?" The most likely answers are B and C (for most people). B.

because heavy sleet was falling, which melt on roadways, but then refreeze because of the relatively cold temperatures, making extremely icy roadways. In C, heavy freezing rain was falling and since the salt trucks were not yet on the roads, the freezing rain would likely freeze faster than

6. Again, this question is also a matter of opinion, depending on how well experienced the driver is and how good their eye sight is. "Which situation will give the worst visibility in a winter storm?" In answer A, small snowflakes were falling heavily and being blown around, this would give extremely poor visibility, but because the snowflakes are small, it will be slightly easier to see. My choice for the answer was the lake effect snow band with extremely heavy snowfall rates along with rather large snowflakes, which was B. This would probably be the best answer, because in lake have eight inches per hour snowfall rates, which would create white out conditions even without any significant winds. Plus, large snowflakes tend to impede visibility more so than smaller snowflakes. In answer C, this type of blowing and drifting of light snow and snow already on the ground will not cause too many visibility problems, but if the winds are extreme enough it is a possibility. 7. "In proximity to a low pressure system, where will the heaviest snow tend to fall, given the right conditions for heavy snowfall?" Generally, during a normal storm system, snow will fall 150 miles to the left of the system's storm track, mainly because this is normally where all of the best forcing mechanisms occur (Answer A). When a strong temperature gradient exists right along the track of the low, the heaviest snow may fall as close as 10 or 20 miles (this would usually occur in an intensifying low or relatively weak low, but sometimes it occurs in incredibly strong low pressure systems). Snow accumulation can still occur if you are in the track of the low, but usually it will warm up and changeover to

8. "At what temperature is it too cold for snow to fall?" I put this question to turn around the myth that it can be too cold to snow. The correct answer is that there is no temperature at which it is too cold to snow. Snow has been observed as falling when temperatures were as cold as -76 degrees Fahrenheit. There are normally two reasons why snow does not usually fall at extremely cold temperatures. The coldest temperatures usually occur in the vicinity of a high pressure system, which causes subsidence and dry air, eliminating cloud cover and any moisture that could be become snow. Another reason is that at extremely cold temperatures, the air holds very little in the way of moisture, so that when clouds do form. there is not enough moisture for snow to form or fall.

"MR. INTENSITY" CLYDE JORDAN III WINS THE INDIANA 155LB. CHAMPIONSHIP!

Local fighter from Malice MMA brought home the championship belt from Fort Wayne Indiana this past weekend. Clyde, who normally fights at 145 lb., stepped up a weight class to take an opportunity to help put northwest Ohio on the map. The match started with the two combatants exchanging punches and kicks until Clyde saw an opening and closed the distance on his opponent. Clyde initiated a clinch and took his guy down with a devastating slam that brought the crowd to its feet. Clyde advanced to mount position where be unloaded a barrage of unanswered strikes until his opponent turned and gave up his back. Clyde then took this opportunity to apply a rear naked choke causing his opponent to tap out in less than two minutes into the first round.

DELTA REIGN BAND TO PERFORM FOR THE "DASHEROOST HOUSE CONCERT SERIES" IN PAULDING

Delta Reign bluegrass band from the Mobile River delta region of Alabama's gulf coast, is best described as bluegrass, meets western swing, meets blues, with a dash of jazz. Formed in the fall of 2004 by founding members Pat and Benita Murphy, the band's "delta bluegrass" has evolved into a distinct musical personality that seems to appeal to listeners regardless of genre. Delta Reign is touring through on their way to the Corsair Concert Series in Tawas City, Michigan and will be stopping through Paulding to perform for the Dasheroost House concert series on Friday, March 2nd. The concert will be held at the home of Verl and Sue Dasher.

With members, George Mason on fiddle and Joshua Faul on upright bass, the band has found just the right chemistry to solidify Delta Reign's "fresh" approach to bluegrass.

Mason, a Harrison, Arkansas native, has had a successful career as a professional musician, performing around the world with such acts as Bobby Vinton, the Glenn Miller orchestra, Patti Page, Tommy Overstreet, the Gatlin Brothers, as well as being band leader, musical director/arranger for the Osmonds for six years. After deciding to come off the road, Mason settled with his family in Gulfport, MS and joined Delta Reign in April 2010. Getting involved with a bluegrass group, he said, was "about getting back to my roots."

"It's honest music. And I think that's one of the things the industry is missing these days," he said. "What's good about this is that it's real," he said. "It's real music for real people." You can find out more about the band by visiting their website at Delta-Reign.com.

Delta Reign recently returned from a successful week in Nashville at the International Bluegrass Music Association's "World of Bluegrass" business conference and trade show where they showcased for industry professionals including a two hour performance at the historic Ernest Tubb Record Shop in downtown Nashville. "The week was even more successful than we even imagined... we have a lot of exciting things in the works for Delta Reign." said Benita Murphy. The band has steadily been performing concerts, festivals and music venues around the southeast, entertaining an increasing fan base. With a diverse song selection, audience interactive show, favorable reviews in several national industry magazines and publications, as well as national and international radio airplay, Delta Reign is "poised to make their mark in the bluegrass genre."

For the Dasheroost house concert on Friday, March 2nd, coffee and soft drinks will be provided. Guests are welcome to bring a favorite snack to share. Seating is limited, so RSVP's are recommended. Contact hosts, Verl or Sue Dasher for reservations and tickets at 419-399-4315 or concertsinyourhome.com or, verldasher@windstream.net
