PAULDING PUTNAM ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE (PPEC) TO GIVE $1.8 MILLION BACK TO MEMBERS

Paulding, OH - Paulding Putnam Electric (PPEC) members in Ohio and Indiana will see a lower electric bill around the holidays. That's because PPEC's Board of Trustees recently approved to return $1.8 million to the cooperative's current and former members. Eligible members will see a credit on their December electric bill. The money is being returned to members in the form of capital credits, also known as profits or margins.

PPEC is a not-for-profcommunity-focused organization. One of PPEC's Cooperative Principles is "Members' Economic Participation," which means members contribute equitably to the capital of the co-op in which they are part-owners. The unique part of the co-op model means members also receive a financial return on their capital.

"Simply put, this means that PPEC members contribute a portion of the capital necessary to grow the co-op and upgrade electric reliability," stated PPEC President and CEO George Carter. "Eventually, as the co-op is financially able to do so, the board approves the capital be returned, or "retired" back to

USDA INVESTS IN WATER & WASTEWATER INFRASTRUCTURE IMPROVEMENTS IN 31 STATES

U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Deputy Under Secretary for Rural Development Donald "DJ" LaVoy announced that USDA is investing $201 million to improve rural water infrastructure in 31 states (PDF, 250 KB).

"Modern, reliable and accessible infrastructure is critical to economic development and quality of life," LaVoy said. "Under the leadership of President Trump and Agriculture Secretary Perdue, USDA is committed to partnering with rural communities to help them improve their infrastructure, because when rural America thrives, all of America thrives."

USDA is providing the funding through the Water and Waste Disposal Loan and Grant program. Eligible applicants include rural cities, towns and water districts. The funds can be used for drinking water, stormwater drainage and waste disposal systems in rural communities with 10,000 or fewer residents. USDA is announcing investments today in Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Mississippi, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Below are examples of

ceiving a $4.9 million loan and a $3.2 million grant to improve its water treatment plant and related facilities. The city will add 1,290 linear feet of water line and 2,375 linear feet of gravity sewer line. It also will install 12 manholes along an unstable stream bed to replace the deteriorated sewer line. The improvements will increase the reliability of the water treatment process and improve water quality.

The Village of Maine, WI, is receiving a $515,000 loan and a $965,000 grant to upgrade the wastewater collection system. Deteriorating manholes will be repaired or replaced, and the Everest Avenue lift station will be relocated. Sewers on the east side of the village will be replaced with new PVC piping, and the manholes will be replaced with ones made out of precast concrete. These improvements will significantly decrease infiltration and inflow into the collection system.

The town of Barre in Orleans County, NY, has been approved for a $500,000 loan and a $601,000 grant to extend public water service to 31 residential customers who have wells that lack safe, potable water. Installing water mains will provide reliable water service to the residents as well as adequate fire protection.

I&M PRESENTS ENERGY EFFICIENCY REBATE TO EAST ALLEN COMMUNITY SCHOOLS

President and Chief Operating Officer Toby Thomas on Tuesday presented a $60,000 energy efficiency incentive rebate check to East Allen County Schools Superintendent Marilyn S. Hissong. As part of the New Haven

Junior-Senior High School major renovation project, Indiana Michigan Power (I&M) and East Allen Community Schools (EACS) worked together to save energy by installing new LED light fixtures and by upgrading the Heating-Ventilation-Air Conditioning (HVAC) system with new digital controls. Together, the energy efficiency measures are expected to reduce the school's energy use by more than 1 million kiloWatt hours annually - the equivalent of powering more than 80 typical homes for a

"I&M is pleased to work with East Allen County Schools leaders to help the school system achieve greater energy efficiency," Thomas said. "The New Haven High School project helps the school system reduce its environmental footprint while reducing energy costs.'

Marilyn Hissong, EACS Superintendent, said: "This partnership with I&M is another example of how East Allen works to responsibly control costs and energy that such energy efficiencies make can serve as real-world examples of lessons students learn within this building in the areas of Science, Technology, Engineering and Math After the announcement at New Haven High School, Kurt Van Horn, Energy Manager for EACS, demonstrated the new LED lights and explained how the school is saving energy.

In addition to using up to 90 percent less energy than traditional lights, LEDs last two-to four-times longer than fluorescent lights and more than 40 times as long as incandescent bulbs. The school's lighting system turns lights off when no movement is detected after a specific

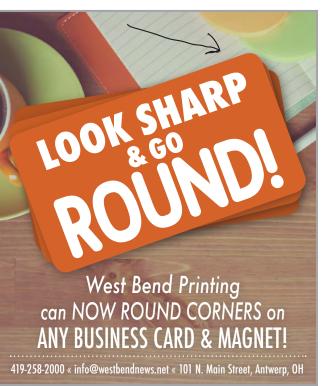

The new HVAC controls constantly monitor temperatures throughout the building and automatically adjust the heating and cooling levels.

I&M has a history of working with East Allen County Schools to save energy. From 2017 to 2019, EACS used I&M energy efficiency programs on 24 projects in various buildings that have saved more nearly 1.5 million kilowatt hours of energy and provided the school district with more than $90,000 in incentive dollars.

OHIO RELEASES STATEWIDE PFAS ACTION PLAN FOR DRINKING WATER

Following a call from Ohio Governor Mike DeWine to prepare a plan to address potential threats to drinking water systems, the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (Ohio EPA) and Ohio Department of Health (ODH) released a statewide action plan to analyze the prevalence of per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) in Ohio's drinking manmade PFAS are chemicals that are used in products such as carpeting, upholstery, cookware, food packaging, and firefighting foam. PFAS contamination from manufacturing operations and firefighting activities can migrate through soil, posing potential contamination threats to surface and ground waters. Although the health impacts of exposure to PFAS chemicals are not fully known, some studies have shown that several chemicals within the PFAS family could negatively impact health.

"We must fully evaluate the prevalence of PFAS in Ohio's drinking water to protect public health and the state's natural resources," said Governor DeWine. "This plan is the first step in learning if the chemicals have a widespread presence."

Under the plan, Ohio EPA will coordinate testing for close to 1,500 public water systems, including those that serve communities, schools, daycares and mobile home parks. Together, these public water systems supply water for about 90 percent of Ohio's population. When PFAS have been detected in a public water system, ODH will work through local health departments to give private water system owners information about PFAS, how to get their water tested, how to reduce exposure risks, and pointof-use treatment options like special water filters. ODH will coordinate with Ohio EPA and other stakeholders to identify potential resources available to assist private water system owners with sampling and analysis for PFAS, and installation and maintenance of water treatment systems.

There are currently no national drinking water standards for PFAS compounds. The establishment of national drinking water standards, called Maximum Contaminant Levels or MCLs, is under consideration by United States Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA). In 2016, U.S. EPA set Health Advisory Levels (HALs) of 70 parts per trillion (ppt) for two of the most studied PFAS chemicals, PFOA and PFOS. Ohio's action plan includes the use of these HALs for PFOA and PFOS and establishes action levels for four additional chemicals in the PFAS family, including GenX, PFBS, PFHxS, and PFNA.

"This statewide action plan will provide a pathway for ODH and Ohio EPA to work together and in partnership with key stakeholders to more fully evaluate the risks of PFAS and assist our communities in addressing these risks," said Ohio EPA Director Laurie Stevenson.

"The science is still evolving regarding PFAS chemicals, but we know that certain people like unborn babies, infants and children are at higher risk for negative health effects if exposed to them," said ODH Director Amy Acton, MD, MPH. "ODH and Ohio EPA look forward to working with public and private water systems and local health departments to protect the health of all Ohioans."

Public system water sam pling is expected to be complete by the end of 2020. Ohio has developed a website for more information at http://pfas.ohio.gov.

those members who contributed it originally."

Including this year's capital credits return, PPEC has returned almost $25 million to its members. According to Carter, this process is what sets PPEC apart from other utilities. "We're not in business to make a profit for shareholders," Carter said. "If there is leftover money, we give it back to members. We return the money to members around the holidays because that's when many people need it the most."

Anyone with questions about their capital credits refund should call PPEC at 1-800-686-2357.

SCIENTISTS SEE DEFECTS IN POTENTIAL NEW SEMICONDUCTOR

A research team has reported seeing, for the first time, atomic scale defects that dictate the properties of a new and powerful semiconductor. The study, published earlier this month in the journal Physical Review X, shows a fundamental aspect of how the semiconductor, beta gallium oxide, controls electricity. Our job is to try to identify why this material, called beta gallium oxide, acts the way it acts at the fundamental level," said Jared Johnson, lead author of the study and a graduate research associate at The Ohio State University Center for Electron Microscopy and Analysis. "It is important to know why this material has the properties it has, and how it acts as a semiconductor, and we wanted to look at it at the atomic level - to see what we could learn.

Scientists have known about beta gallium oxide for about 50 years, but only in the last several years has it become an intriguing option for engineers looking to build more reliable, more efficient high-powered technologies. The material is especially well-suited for devices used in extreme conditions, such as in the defense industry. The team has been studying beta gallium oxide for its potential to provide high-density power.

For this study, the CE-MAS team, overseen by Jinwoo Hwang, assistant professor of materials science and engineering, examined beta gallium oxide under a powerful electron microscope, to see the way the material's atoms interacted. What they saw confirmed a theory first hypothesized about a decade ago by theorists: Beta gallium oxide has a form of imperfection in its structure, something the team refers to as "point defects," which are unlike any defects previously seen in other materials. Those defects matter: For example, they could be places where electricity could be lost in transit among electrons. With proper manipulation, the defects can also provide opportunities for unprecedented control of the material's properties. But understanding the defects must come before we learn how to control them.

'It is very meaningful that we could actually directly observe these point defects, these abnormalities within the crystal lattice," Johnson said. "And these point defects, these oddballs within the lattice structure, lower the energy stability of the structure."

A lower energy stability means that the material might have some flaws that need addressing in order to conduct electricity efficiently, Johnson said, but they don't mean beta gallium oxide would not necessarily be a good semiconductor. The defects can in fact behave favorably to conduct electricity – if scientists can control

"This material has very good properties for those high-powered technologies," he said. "But it is important that we're seeing this on the fundamental level - we're almost understanding the science behind this material and how it works, because this defect, these abnormalities, could affect the way it functions as a semiconductor."

PARSON TO PERSON

By: Dr. James Bachman Dear Parson,

I'm not sure I understand all the imagery of Ecclesiastes 12:1-7. Can you explain?

Solomon is contrasting the brightness and opportunity of youth to the darkness and limitations of old age.

1. Trembling keepers = hands of the aged, v. 3

2. Bowing strong men = legs, v. 3 3. Few remaining grinders = teeth, v. 3 4. Darkened windows = eyes, v. 3 5. Shut doors = ears v. 4

6. Afraid of heights = fear of falling, v. 5

7. Almond trees (blossoms) = white hair, v. 5

8. Grasshoppers = appearance of skin and bones, v. 5

9. Mourners about the streets = professionals waiting to be hired for the funer-

10. Broken vessels = pictures of death, v. 6

11. Body returning to dust and spirit to God = after death, v. 7

Solomon, who had great riches, fame, power and intellect, decided after trying it all, that life was empty except from respecting, obeying and serving God. Ecclesiastes 12: 1 - Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them. verses 13-14 – Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing. Whether it be good, or whether it be evil. He advised to start down that path when you are young and stay on it.

A PART, NOT APART

By: Lonnie Lambert, Oakwood Church of Christ

Eric passed the lighted candle to Sean. As his youth minister, he told Sean how he appreciated him for many reasons, including his great leadership in the youth group, his strong work ethic, and his dependability. Now it was Sean's turn. In this activity designed to build cohesiveness and appreciation in the youth group, to whom would Sean give the candle and say something nice? He gave the lighted candle to Amberlee. One of the reasons he said he elected to give it to her was because she would sing out when the group would praise God in Sean probably never knew the impact that he had made on Amberlee by his gesture and his words.

On December 8, 2015, Sean passed from this life at only 20 years of age after a fatal malfunction of his heart for reasons unknown. All who knew him and loved him are heartbroken, including Amberlee. In his honor, she decided to share a poem that reveals the impact that Sean and his kindness had on her life. She wrote: I thought I was invisible

I thought I was unknown I thought I was unnoticed I thought I was alone Then he said some kind He said them about me

He said I lifted him up He did the same for me He made me feel included His words just touched my

A part, not apart.

That's what Jesus wants for each of us. He doesn't want us to be "APART" from Him, although that is what our sin does: it separates us from God and puts us on the path of eternal destruction (Isaiah 59:1-2; Matthew 7:13-

UPDATE FROM TEAM TEREL -CARD SHOWER

Please help show some love for the Dias family with a Christmas card shower. Terel's battle with cancer has taken a very tough turn, and the family can use all of your love, prayers and support.

Team Terel shared the following: "Zoey LOVES opening mail! She is very worried about her mommy so anything to get her excited and her mind off of it!!" Zoey is Terel and husband, Devin's, oldest daughter. She is 2 1/2 vears old.

Let's get that mail pouring in, Paulding County! Send cards to the address below, in care of the Dias family.

Haviland, OH 45851

Terel Arnett-Dias moved to a hospice facility last week. We know she will be cared for so well!

If you plan on visiting, please message the Team Terel Page for more information. More information and thoughts from Team Terel/ Family: "The doctors tried all they could and we all know this and are SOO thankful for the medical team and Devin for being so strong and standing by her side.

"Unfortunately, there is nothing left to do at this time, but let Terel pass peacefully and be with her savior.

We are ALL shocked by how sudden this began after all the shrinkage of cancer/ tumors. But like Devin told us "Unfourtnulatey, that is what this cancer does, but she fought really hard!"

"He(and we) are ALL so fortunate the last couple of months to have had SO many WONDERFUL memories made, and so much love and support from ALL of you!

Please continue to keep Devin, Zoey, Aubree, and the families in your prayers and a peaceful passing.

"Zoey is also enjoying opening up her Christmas Cards, please feel free to continue sending them to her! Some "elves" are planning to stop by her home and decorate the outside of her home with Christmas lights! "We all just can NOT thank you enough for your prayers, your help, thoughts, donations, and support.

'There are no words to explain the thankfulness from Devin, the girls, and the families. Terel truly is a light in all of our lives."

USE YEAR-END BONUS (OR GIFT) WISELY

Bryan Post, Edward Jones Financial Advisor

As 2019 draws to a close, you may be anticipating or have already received - a year-end bonus from your employer. Or you might be receiving a substantial cash gift for the holidays. (If you're really lucky, you might get both.) You can doubtlessly think of many ways to spend this money right now, but how can you use it to help yourself in the long run?

Here are a few sugges-

Pay off some debts. Virtually all of us carry some necessarily a bad thing. For example, your mortgage not only gives you a place to live and a chance to build equity in your home, but the interest payments are typically tax deductible. Other debts, though, such as those on consumer items, are not so positive - you generally can't deduct the interest payments, and the items themselves probably won't enhance your personal wealth. Plus, the bigger your monthly debt payments, the less you'll have to invest for your future. So, you might want to use your bonus or monetary gift to pay off, or at least pay down, some of your less productive debts.

type of debt, and that's not

Start an emergency fund. If you were to face a large, unexpected expense, such as the need for a new furnace or a major car repair, how would you pay for it? If you didn't have the cash on hand, you might be forced to dip in to your long-term investments, such as your stocks and mutual funds. A much better option is to build an emergency fund, containing six to 12 months' worth of living expenses, with the money kept in a liquid, low-risk account. It will take time to build such a fund, of course, but your year-end bonus or gift money could give you a good start.

Contribute to your IRA. You can put in up to $6,000 to your IRA, or $7,000 if you're 50 or older. And although you've got until April 15, 2020, to fully fund your IRA for the 2019 tax year, you still might want to put your "extra" money into your account right away. If you wait, you'll probably find other uses for this money. And if you're going to enjoy a comfortable retirement, you'll need to maximize every possible resource - and your IRA is one of your best ones. Furthermore, the sooner you get the money into your IRA, the more potential it will have to grow over time.

Feed your college fund. If you're already contributing to a college fund for your young children or grandchildren, you can use your year-end bonus or monetary gift to add to the fund. If you haven't already started such an account, you might want to use this money for that purpose. You could open a 529 plan, which provides possible tax benefits and gives you control of the funds until it's time for them to be used for college or some type of vocational school. (Depending on where you live, you might also get tax benefits from your state if you use a 529 savings plan to pay for K-12 expenses.)

To achieve all your fi cial goals, you'll need to take advantage of your opportunities - and your year-end bonus or monetary gift can certainly be one of them.

DON'T MISS HEAVEN

By: Doris Applegate

Have you ever wondered why the streets of Heaven are pure gold or why each gate is a pearl or the foundation of the wall around the city has precious stones? These are: jasper, sapphire, chalcedony, emerald, sardonyx, sardius, chrysolite, beryl, topaz, chrysoprase, jacinth and amethyst. Wow! What a beautiful place Heaven is!

God surely loves gems and beautiful colors doesn't he? Read more about this in Revelation chapters 21 and 22 since this book is rarely taught in most churches.

When we think of the pearl, it is most interesting to write about since it is produced with such a painful process.

When the irritant (a piece of sand or a parasite) gets between the shell and the soft membrane of the little creature inside, the mollusk coats the "intruder" with layer upon layer of a shiny substance called nacre. Year after year this goes on until finally a precious beautiful pearl is formed.

The covering of the blood of Jesus on our lives (the "sin irritant") produces 'pearls" of great purity also. The suffering and pain that Jesus Christ endured was to "get rid" of our sins. There is absolutely no other way for our sins to be covered. We cannot work or try to be "good" enough. Jesus is the only way to be saved. He is the door. No one comes to God the Father but through Jesus. Read John 10:9. The pearly gates of Heaven will someday open for everyone who has their sins forgiven and covered.

If even you have an "irritant" of hatred, rejection, unkindness, abuse or any other thing that "bothers" you, just remember the story of the pearl and start "coating" that person with the "love" coating. You will be surprised at what will happen. "Love covers a multitude of sins and wrongs" (I

Grover Hill's Annual Literacy Night again was a huge success. With over 200 people attending, students and families learned how to make reading and study skills fun and exciting. The theme was Family Game Night. The purpose of the night was to teach everyone how to take a school assignment and put it into a fun learning activity. All that attended left with a great focus on making reading and study skills more engaging. Some children even walked away with a game that was used in the classrooms.

We want to stand before God "coated" with His love and grace having done all He wanted us to do so He will say, "Well done". Someone said, "Everything you have ever wanted is on the other side of fear", we are fearless people doing the will of God. Someone else said, "Believe you can and you are halfway there." "One life and it will soon be past, only what's done for Christ will last!"

Amen.

THIS YEAR'S PROGRESS

By: Stan Jordan

While sitting here watching it snow, I think back about this year's progress in the area.

Nick Bragg is building a new barn house out on CR 220 and not to be out done by brother, Bob Bragg is building a nice new house out on SR 49 and Road 144.

The Smith's have rebuilt their new house down on Harrmann Road, Mr. Dooley has built that new warehouse down on Franklin Street (Archer Drive). Dr. Caine's old house has been torn down and looks like there will be some building there.

The old Tiny DeLong's lunch building, on the corner of South Main and Stone Street, they have been remodeling that. There has been remodeling on the 1891 house by the Yenser's. The city has put in two new water lines: South Main and from Erie Street east to Water Plant Road. The city has repaired the catch basins on Main Street, but the best thing was they black topped two of those miserable manhole covers on North Main Street. I had been asked a couple of times to write a column on those two places... thank you Town Hall for fixing those There is a beautiful entrance now out at the football stadium. Mercer Landmark has redone the corner of River Street and Monroe and it looks very nice now.

Ben Kauser and family have settled down in their new house on the River Road We got some new machines here at West Bend News, we can make most any sign or banner. Mrs. Sharold Jailor has purchased a new condo out in Oley's addition. The Antwerp Conservation Club has purchased a new utility trailer to use at the fairs and local events. It makes a good will piece as it is decorated nicely. While talking to Oley, he said that there are 5 new dwellings finished or underway at the Maumee Landing.

There has been a number of improvements on the marina down by the park; it has been made easier to use. This was done by the A.C.D.C. vol-

OLD TOM

By: Stan Jordan

Charlie was running the combine and he had the header down pretty low to get all the beans and he tore up a nest of mice and the mother mouse and they were all killed.

Well, when they got to Heaven, St. Peter said, "I want your whole family to work in the main mess hall. Just run around and eat all the crumbs and things...just keep the floor clean.

After a month or so St. Peter came around and asked mother mouse, "How are things going?" She replied, "Fine. We really enjoy our job, but we could do a better job; quicker and easier, if we had a pair of roller skates. St. Peter said, "By golly, I will see that you soon have those skates."

Well, the scene changes back to the states and we zoom in on Tom, the big, lazy and sharp neighborhood cat. He sleeps 23 hours a day and has run of the area, but he was too slow and didn't look both ways and he was run over in the street and was killed.

When he got to Heaven, St. Peter said, "I don't have a job for you just yet, so just enjoy yourself around the main mess hall for a month

After about a month or so, St. Peter stopped and asked Tom how he was get-

Tom said, "Oh boy, I love it up here. I just enjoy every day in every way."

THE SIX MILE RESERVOIR

By: Stan Jordan

This is some of what I know and don't know about

It was laid out back in the 1830's when they were surveying for the Wabash and Erie Canal. Both the canal and reservoir were ready to go in 1843.

Well this was to furnish water for the canal from Hutchin's Lock down to Junction. Six Mile Creek furnished the water and it dumped it into the reservoir about where the Antwerp Community Church is.

When they put U.S. 24 over there they had to tear up some of the creek, but if you look off to the west, you can still see the Six Mile Creek. They had to put in some large cement tile to get rid of the water. You are not allowed to monkey with the natural flow of drain water, the river banks and such.

For 30 years the canal was a very busy place and the Six Mile Reservoir done its job well. Then the railroads started to take in all the freight business, and the canal slowly died away. The railroad was laid through Antwerp about 1860. Indiana's part of the canal was closed in 1870, so the canal was only busy from Antwerp to Junction to the Miami Canal - 18 miles. By the 1880's the canal was a marsh and the people wanted it drained for a number of They all banded together and asked permission from the state to blow the dam, but was denied. But by gum, they blew it on April 24th, 1887. The men blew the locks at Junction first to get the water out of the canal and then in a few minutes another 100 lbs of dynamite blew the locks at Tate's Landing (that was about were Emerald Road is on SR 111). Then up at Hutchin's Lock, they used 50lbs of dynamite and they blew the sides of the reservoir in a number of

Now that was state's property and the boys were in trouble. The governor had 50 soldiers here to guard against destruction, but the soldiers and dynamiters got along fine. After a few months, the water was gone. The reservoir was abandoned in 1887.

Governor Foraker came and shook hands with evervone and none of the men were charged.

I forgot to mention that the surplus water from the reservoir ran off to the Maumee River and that big ditch was called the Zuber Cutoff, of course that big chazm is still there. At one time that section was called the Jailor Bridge.

This is all history. See ya!

OHIO STATE BUCKEYES!

By: Stan Jordan

In last week's paper, I said Ohio State would play Penn State on Saturday night... well, that was a big mistake! I don't know why I wrote that because I know better! Ohio State played Wisconsin in a Big Ten Championship

Well, this is Monday, December 9th and the Buckeyes won over Wisconsin in the Big Ten Championship. The standings for the CCS is: NO. 1 LSU; No. 2 Ohio State; No. 3 Clemson; No. 4 Oklahoma.

NO. 1 will play NO. 4 on December 28th and NO. 2 will play No. 3 on the same

The CCS play off will be January 11th.

WATER LINE #2

By: Stan Jordan

The new water line replacement stopped at the Water Plant Road. The water line east on Canal was not as old and in good shape so it was not replaced.

When the original lines were laid in 1931, you did not have to hook up with city water if you didn't want to, but that would have been a privilege. There was no plumbers in town at that time, and there was no money to pay them anyhow. Most people had a well and a path.

Antwerp was becoming a city... we had water, telephones, gas, electricity and about 1,000 people. In 1931, there was very hard times, but as the 30's went by, things slowly started to get better. By 1939 and 1940 things were a lot better. You didn't earn as much money, but things were a lot cheaper.

ROMAINE LETTUCE ALERT AFFECTS OHIO, OTHER

I saw that there's been another alert about romaine lettuce. How do I know whether what's in my fridge is part of the impacted varieties? Unless you can verify whether the romaine lettuce that's in your fridge was NOT harvested from Salinas, California, you should throw it out. That's per the latest warning from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which issued an updated food safety alert on Dec.4. The alert advises consumers, restaurants, and retailers to avoid eating or selling any romaine lettuce grown in the Salinas, California, growing region. This includes all useby dates and brands of romaine lettuce from the area.

The warning is the result of the recent multistate outbreak of Shiga toxin-producing Escherichia coli O157:H7 (E. coli O157:H7) infections linked to romaine lettuce from the region. Since Dec. 4, some 102 reported cases of illness in 23 states including Ohio have been associated with this outbreak, the CDC said. Some 58 hospitalizations have been reported due to the outbreak, with 10 people having developed kidney failure, although, thankfully, no deaths have been reported, the CDC said.

Of the 102 reported cases of illnesses, 12 were reported in Ohio, the CDC said.

"We had a similar situation just before Thanksgiving holiday last year, when Romaine lettuce that was grown in the Yuma, AZ agricultural region was implicated in an outbreak," said Sanja Ilic, Food Safety State Specialist, Ohio State University Extension. OSU Extension is the outreach arm of The Ohio State University College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sci-

"As a result, all Romaine lettuce was recalled then to prevent illnesses," she said.

The difference between that recall and the current one this year, is that the growers are since using traceability labels with the origin of the farm, which has helped to narrow down where the impacted lettuce originated, Ilic said. Every lettuce head or a package of lettuce you buy

Phone: 419-258-2000 • Email: info@westbendnews.net should have a sticker stating where it was produced," she said. "Unless you can see it where it was grown, do not serve it. "This is important when eating at home, as well when eating out in a restaurant. You can ask your server to verify that the restaurant is not serving contaminated lettuce before ordering any-thing that contains lettuce." This is the fourth time in two years that romaine lettuce has been associated with an E. coli outbreak. That begs the question, just how does a leafy green vegetable such as lettuce become infected with a pathogen such as this? As noted in a previous edition of Chow Line, if animal feces are in the irrigation water, the field or in the soil in which the lettuce is grown, or if the lettuce comes into contact with water that contains the pathogen, E. coli can be transferred from the feces onto the lettuce.

It can also be spread if a person who carries the pathogen doesn't wash his or her hands after using the bathroom, and then that person processes or prepares food.

It's important to note that washing contaminated greens doesn't remove all bacteria, food safety experts say. While cooking can eliminate E. coli, most people don't cook their leafy green salads. For that reason, avoidance is sometimes recommended when the source of an outbreak is identified.

Symptoms of E. coli infection can begin as soon as 24 to 48 hours-or as long as 10 days-after eating contaminated food. Those symptoms include vomiting, severe or bloody diarrhea, and abdominal pain.

So, if you have—or have had—the affected romaine lettuce in your fridge, you should wash and sanitize the drawer, shelf, or other removable part in your refrigerator where the romaine lettuce was stored. You can wash the drawer, shelf, or other removable part by hand with hot, soapy water, the CDC says. You can then sanitize that part using a solution of 1 tablespoon of liquid bleach in 1 gallon of

PAULDING CO. BICENTENNIAL NOTES

By: Caroline Longardner White-tailed Deer Hunting In Ohio - "Walnut Gypsy Stew"

The opening day of Ohio's white-tailed deer-gun hunting season (2019) resulted in 15,501 deer harvested by Buckeye State hunters. During the 2018 season, 13,651 deer were harvested on opening day of gun season. Paulding Co. hunters harvested 140 deer in 2019 (87 deer in 2018).

The top 10 counties for deer harvest on opening day of Dec. 2 include: Coshocton (663), Ashtabula (601), Tuscarawas (557), Knox (544), Muskingum (511), Guernsey (426), Holmes (423), Licking (399), Harrison (385), and Carroll (377).

Through Dec. 1, 2019, 76,822 deer have been taken by Ohio archery hunters. Plus, Ohio's young hunters checked 6,234 white-tailed deer during the 2019 two day youth gun season, Nov. 23-24. The deer-gun season is open to Sunday, Dec. 8, as well as Dec. 21-22. Deer-muzzle loader season is Sat., Jan. 4 thru Tues. Jan. 7, 2020. Deer archery season is open now through Sunday, Feb. 2, 2020. Many good cooking tips and recipes for removing the "gamey" taste of your venison are on the internet. Soaking the meat in salt water, milk, buttermilk or vinegar to remove the blood from the flesh is said to improve the flavor. Aging the meat under refrigeration for 3 to 7 days is said to enhance the tenderness of venison. Soaking the meat in marinades containing wine or vinegar with flavors of soy or garlic helps with the flavor. Serve the meat with sweet or spicy sauces and condiments to temper the wild taste. Trim fat from the game meats to remove the major source of the wild flavor. Do not overcook (especially European Deer) as it makes it too dry. When frying, grilling or broiling, it should be done quickly. Stews and pot roasts should be cooked very slowly and at low temperatures. Crock pots are very good for this. Try not to pierce the meat with a fork when cooking to retain the juices. Venison is lower in calories, fat and cholesterol that most meats and is a good alternative to traditional beef or pork.

A favorite recipe of General Anthony Wayne, our famous American patriot, was found as follows:

"WALNUT GYPSY STEW"

2 tablespoons butter (or more if needed); 1 pound ground veal (Note: venison seems more apt to have been available during his time); 2 tablespoons flour; 1 cup milk; 3 tablespoons grated cheese; 3/4 teaspoon salt; 1/2 teaspoon pepper; 3 tablespoons walnuts, finely chopped

Melt the butter in a hot skillet. Fry the ground meat until it is well done (more butter may have to be added). Gradually add the flour, blending well. Add the milk and continue stirring, adding the cheese, stirring until it is melted. Add rest of ingredients and stir until well blended.

Serve while very hot.

Rice or potato dish may be accompaniment.

General Anthony Wayne (1745-96) passed many times through Paulding Co. along our Maumee and Auglaize Riverways on his way to Ft. Wayne and the Battle of Fallen Timbers. He is a famous folk hero and commander during the Revolutionary War. Gen. Wayne was quoted as saying that he never got tired of the above "Walnut Gypsy Stew". It was one of his favorites.

Note: It was my personal note that "venison seems more apt to have been available during his time". However, perhaps veal was more prominent than I realize for that era. (If there was a cow for the milk and cheese, there must have been a mother cow for the "veal" calf!) CL Lining all of the top shelves on the south wall of the Library are several Christmas wreaths on display. This dinner was the opening of the Community Wreath Drawing which will continue until December 16th when the winning ticket will be drawn from each of the wreath's baskets. All the wreaths were donated for this fundraising event by area businesses and library patrons. Here's how you can participate and possibly win one of the beautiful holiday wreaths: Tickets are available at the Antwerp Library. Each wreath is numbered with a bucket that has a matching number. Simply put your name on the back of the tickets that you purchase and then decide which wreath(s) you would like to win and dump your ticket(s) in the corresponding buckets. For more information, contact the Antwerp Library at 419-258-2855. Remember the drawing will be on December 16th!

Many North Western Electric Cooperative (NWEC) members will see a lower electric bill around the holidays. This month, the local electric cooperative is returning $925,000 in capital credits to current and former members. These capital credits represent the cooperative's margins, or money left over after all bills have been paid.

After being used as working capital, the money is returned to members. It represents each co-op member's ownership — or equity — in his or her cooperative. Capital credits are allocated to members in proportion to the dollar amount of electricity used. Then, usually on bills due in December, some of those allocations are distributed back to the members in what NWEC calls a retirement This month, eligible members' bills should show a credit for 20 percent of their allocation from 2018 (allocation notices were included on bills for March use), along with any unretired capital credits from 1999. DEPRESSION AFFECTS ONE-THIRD OF LUNG CANCER PATIENTS

About one-third of patients newly diagnosed with the most common form of lung cancer have moderate to severe symptoms of depression, a new study sug-

For many of these patients - particularly those with severe symptoms - depression occurs in a toxic blend of high levels of anxiety, traumatic stress, impaired day-to-day functioning and significant pain and other physical symptoms, findings showed.

The results suggest doctors need to screen lung cancer patients for depression and then act to refer patients for care, said Barbara Andersen, lead author of the study and professor of psychology at The Ohio State

"Some oncologists may have a mindset that 'of course, you're depressed, you have lung cancer.' This may show an under-appreciation of the breadth of depressive symptoms and other difficulties which accompany it," Andersen said.

Patients with moderate or severe depressive symptoms are more likely to have lower quality of life and worse disease outcomes compared to those also diagnosed with lung cancer but with mild or no depressive symptoms.

"This is more than having a 'low mood.' When severe, the depression rarely gets better without treatment," she said.

The study, published online in the journal Lung Cancer, also included Ohio State psychology students and researchers from Ohio Comprehensive Cancer Center - Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Richard J. Solove Research

Data came from 186 patients at one cancer hospital who had been recently diagnosed with advanced-stage non-small cell lung cancer, which accounts for 85 percent of all lung cancer cases. Patients completed a telephone survey measuring psychological and physical symptoms, stress and dayto-day functioning. Results showed that 8 percent of the patients scored at the severe depressive symptom level and 28 percent had moderate depressive symptoms. Nearly all (93 percent) of the patients with severe depression said the depressive symptoms made it difficult to do their work, take care of things at home and get along with other people. They reported high levels of hopelessness, and one-third of those with severe depressive symptoms reported thoughts of suicide. They had extreme levels of cancer-related stress, and the least confidence that their cancer treatment would help. Compared to other cancer patients, those with high levels of depressive symptoms were much more likely to report severe physical symptoms, including 73 percent who said they experienced "quite a bit" or "very

'Depression is just part of what these patients are dealing with. It comes with this whole package of worse functioning, more physical symptoms, stress, anxiety and more," Andersen said.

"All of these can have negative effects on treatment, overall health, quality of life and disease progression."

In general, those with moderate depressive symptoms saw negative effects that were somewhat less but still significant - than those with severe symptoms, the study found.

But there were two striking differences between the groups.

One was in the severity of generalized anxiety disorder (or GAD) symptoms, the most common anxiety disorder. About 11 percent of those with moderate depressive symptoms had moderate to severe GAD, compared to 73 percent of patients with severe depressive symptoms.

"GAD worry or fear can be particularly toxic for lung cancer patients. It can impede decision-making and participation in treatment. Moreover, a common symptom of lung cancer, shortness of breath, can worsen with anxiety and even induce panic for some," Andersen said.

Second, many fewer of the patients with moderate depressive symptoms had impairments in self care (8 percent versus 33 percent in those with severe depressive symptoms), mobility (33 percent versus 73 percent) and usual activities (38 percent versus 100 percent).

Andersen said she was also struck by the "extraordinarily" high levels of cancer-specific stress reported by those with severe depressive symptoms. The levels exceeded the cutoff for likely diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder. Andersen said she could not find

Kids and parents began to flock to the station to sit with Santa and tell him if they were naughty or nice this year, and to let him know what is on their Christmas Wish List.

Santa's Workshop was also set up for the kids to Shop with a Cop. The Antwerp Chamber members provided $5 gifts for the kids to purchase for their loved ones. Chamber volunteers were ready to help the kids tag and wrap their gifts too after the police officers helped them pick out their presents.

FIELD REPORTS FROM OHIO DIVISION OF WILD-LIFE OFFICERS

Northwest Ohio - Wildlife District Two

In September, State Wildlife Officer Michele Butler, assigned to Erie County, received a call from a squirrel hunter at Resthaven Wildlife Area. The caller believed that someone was attempting to bait deer for the upcoming archery season. Officer Butler went to the location of the reported bait pile and found an unlabeled tree stand as well as a trail camera overlooking a pile of apples. On the opening morning of archery season, Officer Butler went to the tree stand but found that no one was there. She returned to the area later that afternoon to find a hunter was in the tree stand with a crossbow. Officer Butler contacted the hunter, who stated that he had placed the apples to attract deer. The hunter was charged with placing bait on a wildlife area. He was also ordered to remove the apples that day and was given a warning for having an unlabeled tree stand on a wildlife area. In court, he was found guilty and was ordered to pay $140 in court costs and State Wildlife Officer Ryan Kennedy, assigned to Hardin County, received a complaint from a landowner of someone hunting on his property without permission. Aaron Brown, assigned to Wayne County, contacted an individual who had recently killed a deer and had it hanging in his garage. The results of the investigation revealed that the man had killed the deer and realized shortly afterward that he had not purchased his deer permit. While he was speaking with the individual, Officer Brown noticed that one of the antlers was cut off. He asked the individual about the antlers. and the man admitted that he cut it off. Fortunately, the deer was game checked as an antlered deer but with the wrong amount of points listed. Officer Brown issued the man two summonses and he appeared in court. State Wildlife Officer Tom Frank, assigned to Mahoning County, received information from ODNR's call center referencing several individuals catching fish with a cast net below the Lake Milton dam. Sergeant Josh Orwick, from the Ohio Division of Parks and Watercraft, was familiar with the area and responded to the scene. Officer Orwick recorded the activity, contacted and identified the suspects, and seized both the net and more than 40 sport fish that the men had illegally taken. Officer Frank reviewed the report from Officer Orwick and consulted the prosecutor regarding potential wildlife charges. One of the men was issued three summonses and ordered to appear in court. The man was convicted and paid more than $1,000 in fines, court costs, and restitution. In addition, the cast net and the fish were forfeited to the Division of Wildlife.

Southeast Ohio – Wildlife District Four While on patrol in Gallia County, State Wildlife Officer Roy Rucker contacted a bow hunter who was exiting the field for the day. During the contact with the hunter, Officer Rucker verified that he had the proper license and permit for hunting deer in Gallia County. The hunter stated that he had not seen any deer that morning, but he was going to hunt that evening as well. Officer Rucker wished him better luck in the evening hunt and continued on patrol.

Southwest Ohio - Wildlife District Five

State Wildlife Officer Jim Carnes was on patrol during the deer gun season in Highland County. He observed a small group of hunters walking toward a house. All the hunters were dressed in hunter orange and were carrying guns. As Officer Carnes pulled into the farm lane, one of the individuals walked away from the group and stopped behind a grain cart that was parked in the field. As Officer Carnes parked, the man walked away from the grain cart and toward the group of hunters. When Officer Carnes contacted the hunters, the same man said he wasn't hunting. Officer Carnes took him back to the grain cart and discovered that the hunter's rifle was hidden inside. Officer Carnes issued citations for hunting without a license and without a deer permit. The man paid a bond forfeiture for both violations which totaled $600.

LATE PLANTING LEADS TO WETTER HARVESTED GRAIN

COLUMBUS, More Ohio farmers invested extra time and fuel this year to dry their harvested corn and soybeans because both grains were planted several weeks late and had less time to dry in the field.

While drying harvested corn in a mechanical dryer is typical each year, some producers in the state dried soybeans this year for the first time ever.

'Soybeans dry a whole lot better outside when it's 70 degrees and you can run around in short sleeves. Farmers are harvesting in winter coats," said Eric Richer, an Ohio State University Extension educator in Fulton County, on the far northwestern border of the state. OSU Extension is the outreach arm of The Ohio State University College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences

If grain stays in a dryer too long, fires can occur.

Also, the longer that corn and soybeans sit in drying units, the greater chance the grains will turn brittle, crack, or break down into dust particles—all of which can decrease the price a grower gets for the grain.

The grain-drying process comes with risks every year, 'but they're worse when you have wetter grain than normal because the grain has to spend more time in the dryer," said Jason Hartschuh, an OSU Extension educator in Crawford County, just west of Mansfield. When Ohio corn is harvested, it typically contains about 20% moisture, but this year some grain has 35% to 40% moisture—nearly double the typical level, Hartschuh said. "That's why we have concerns this year," he

Across the state, corn is 90% harvested and soybeans are 95% harvested, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report issued Dec. 2. Both are slightly behind the average harvesting pace over the last five years—corn by 5% and soybeans by 4%.

The delay in harvest comes after a delay in spring planting. Growers in western and northwestern Ohio had the greatest delays in planting-having to sow seed about a month later than usual because of unprecedented rain levels last spring. As a result of planting delays, both crops matured later into the fall when there was less daylight and heat to dry them.

Even during years when planting is on time, corn typically needs to be dried with a mechanical dryer to ensure it contains only 15% moisture. But soybeans have a shorter growing season and typically completely dry for the first time in their careers," Richer said. If grain is not sufficiently dry before it is stored in a bin, the grain could develop mold. And if the grain is overdried and breaks up into fine dust, that dust can form a crust in the grain bin. That crust can block the flow of air throughout the bin, causing the grain to cool improperly, Hartschuh said. That's when clogs in the grain bin can occur, stopping the flow of grain out of the bin. Given the wetter grain

this year, Hartschuh recommended that farmers take the following precautions: Sell the wettest grain
